PULLING PLUG ON ESD

It is so shockingly disheartening that 4J has turned its back on Lane County's children by withdrawing from the Education Service District. The philosophy that makes ESD functional, by supplying important educational services, is based on all players playing. When the biggest district pulls the plug on essential services that benefit all of Lane County's students, the system suffers irreparable damage. Due to its size, 4J doesn't think they need the ESD, but many of our smaller school districts rely on crucial ESD services that they can't afford on their own.

Kudos to Springfield and Bethel for being team players. Only advocating for your own, 4J, will ultimately bring us all down.

EVERYONE'S CONCERN

We often hear that "hungry people are not the government's concern." But as FOOD for Lane County executive director Beverlee Hughes has explained, these are our neighbors, our classmates, our coworkers, and the average food stamp allocation is just $130 per person per month. The recent cut in food stamps will lower the monthly food assistance to more than 811,000 Oregonians, including 181,334 school-age students.

Yes, the number requesting food stamps is growing! Yes, food is becoming more expensive! For the world's richest country to now take the food out of the mouths of our low-income neighbors is unthinkable but it has really happened. Tell our representatives in Congress we want cuts restored. Remember, too, that FOOD for Lane County needs our support more than ever!

WE ARE ALL NATIVES

While I agreed with most of the points made in Kayla Godowa Tufti's column [10/31] on the UO, I felt that she missed a good opportunity to educate others due to her incorrect approach. She wrote, "Let's not be naïve and convince ourselves that the same sexist, racist, oppressive, colonist institution that is responsible for the mockery and marginalization of our disenfranchised communities gives a damn about us." This statement makes a generalization about the UO community that is overly pessimistic and leads to a closure of communication between the two parties. The statement creates an enemy where there need not be one. Has there been a history of racism, sexism and colonialism in Oregon? Yes, obviously. But to make things better you have to reach out to others and educate them in a way that doesn't first throw mud in their faces.

There is a unity underlying all human beings that can be tapped into and used wisely. We are all natives of somewhere. We have all been disenfranchised in some way. I don't say this to lessen your individual story; I tell you this so that you can use it to unify people, so that the work of healing can begin. When you see yourself as others, and others see themselves as you, then we can make some progress as a human race.

RESPONSE FROM UO

We write to address and apologize for our failure to acknowledge the source of the Halloween letter Kayla Godowa Tufti mentions in her "She Who Watches" column Oct. 31, "Fake Apologies, False Hope."

As supervisors of University of Oregon's Bias Response Team, we work with numerous students, one of whom recommended that a letter be sent out to UO students like the "respectful Halloween" letter that had been sent out at the University of Minnesota.

We did not know the letter had been taken verbatim by our student from the Minnesota letter. We recognize that we should have inquired more directly of the student before adding the names of Vice President Robin Holmes and Yvette Alex-Assensoh to what was presented as a draft letter for them to sign if they liked it.

We take plagiarism very seriously at the UO and acknowledge our failure to prevent it in this situation. We have reached out to the original writers of the letter and apologized for our failure to source their work.

We will use this as an opportunity to support our students in their learning process and will emphasize the importance of upholding the highest academic and administrative standards in our work.

MORE FEMALE BOOKERS

The cover article last week [10/31] cites Mac Goodwin of Oak Street Speakeasy as the lone female booker in Eugene.

No disrespect to Mac and the impressive amount of work she does, but I call bullshit. I have been booking shows in Eugene for almost two years now under the title of Behavior Castle. Katie Stavasano has been setting up shows with Small Howl for several years, hosting heaps of rad ladies, women and girls of every genre almost weekly. I'm sure there are other ladies booking, too.

I grew up in Eugene and in the past few years, I was frustrated at the lack of bands I wanted to see playing here. I also grew up attending Rock 'n' Roll Camp for Girls in Portland, and after that, hosting The Girls Room radio show on KWVA for five years. More than anyone, I wanted to see actual up close and personal, live and in the flesh girls playing music. I also wanted loud rock 'n' roll, not the singer-songwriter stuff that I enjoy quietly at home alone.

Instead of complaining, I started to set up my own shows with the help of my boyfriend, Sammy. Lots of bands want to play in Eugene, and our little operation has been growing with every event. The author claims there are few female bands playing in Eugene. In the past year, we've hosted three rad bands containing all-female members. Almost every one of our shows has had at least one girl in one of the bands. Just because a show isn't billed as a "girl band" doesn't mean there aren't ladies rocking it.

You may not see these shows listed in the R-G, so how do you find out about them? Check your neighborhood phone pole, House of Records or even the bulletin board at your friendly downtown grocery store, and you'll find a flier. Follow the blogs of people you like in town, the

The Civic Solution

GROWING SOUTH EUGENE NEEDS MORE PARK FACILITIES

There seems to be an excellent option for the 10-acre Civic Stadium property: Use it to help expand the city of Eugene's park system.

We have witnessed unprecedented residential development in the greater south Eugene area with an astonishing number of new multifamily and student housing units springing up. This pace of construction is resulting in a rapidly expanding local population. Unfortunately, public facilities and services are failing to keep up.

To accommodate all this new growth without compromising the quality of urban services for existing residents, the city needs to be providing more facilities. To maintain our park standards, the more residential construction we have, the more parkland we need. When a city fails to keep up with growth, services and quality of life suffer.

Eugene collects a development impact fee for parks that is supposed to expand the system as we grow. The city collected a record $2.5 million in park impact fees last year. However the central and south Eugene area that has seen the most growth has had little investment in new parks. Instead, the funds have been expended mostly in Santa Clara and Golden Gardens.

Our recreational facilities already look overburdened and lack maintenance. Amazon Pool has huge lines. Spencer Butte has become a "highway" of hikers on nice days and a slip-and-slide the rest of the year. City tennis courts are so cracked and battered one has to weigh the joys of playing tennis with the risks of a sprained ankle.

There is an immediate opportunity to help address the need for parkland and recreational facilities by acquiring the Civic Stadium site. If the School District were to offer to return this property to the city at cost, rather than trying to profit from it, the site could be purchased with last year's park impact fees. The public supports this transfer, based on a recent survey (see Slant, 10/31). And there is little support for any commercial development at this site.

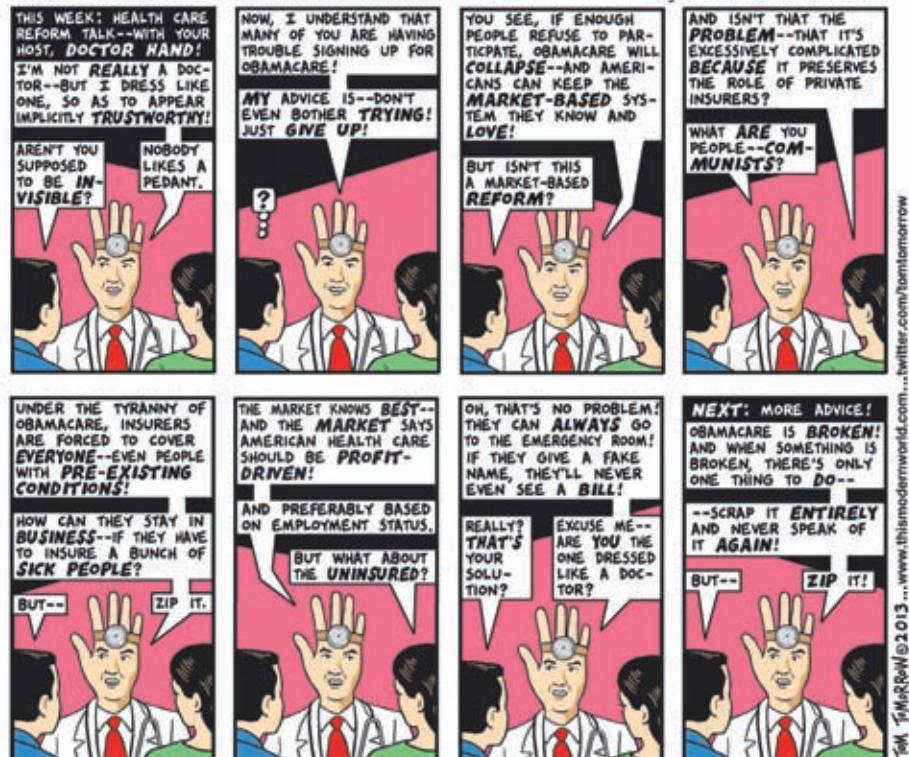

The city might look at creating an all-season, multiple-use recreation facility geared toward promoting the health and fitness of local residents of all ages. Perhaps the city could team up with the Y to help meet the community's needs.

In terms of coping with growth impacts, it's clear that Springfield's Willamalane Park & Recreation District has done a great job of expanding parkland and providing new facilities. Maybe Eugene needs an independent parks district, too, that would focus more attention and resources on our parks and recreation facilities and act quickly when there are opportunities like the Civic Stadium site.

DESIGNED TO FAIL

Five percent of the world's population, the U.S. consumes a third of the world's resources and makes nearly half the waste. America, the hub of capitalism, rewards products that are made fallible, that will end up in a landfill or the oceans unable to be repaired. It's planned that way so that consumers will have to buy that product anew.

It is not a matter of technical knowledge or lack of resilient materials that's the problem. The problem is that our present economy rewards shareholders more if they sell two (or more) items than if they produce for consumers one durable one. The externalities or costs not accounted for are extra material, transport energy, labor and poor quality.

A pair of sneakers, a car or any other manufactured good that is intentionally designed to break down before its full potential is achieved may make a profit to a minority of CEOs and will add to the economy in the form of taxes, but I argue that looking at this from a wider perspective, the rest of the world ends up losing. Aside from filling landfills with garbage, we produce many times more the toxins that end up in water, air and soil.

To end this problem we have nothing less than to look at capitalism, which rewards profit and ignores consequences for the rest of life on Earth.

Humanity has in its history come up with minds capable of creating goods efficiently. The greedy, money-only-oriented people should give way to them.

DeFazio's Devolution

CONGRESSMAN MOVES TO THE DARK SIDE

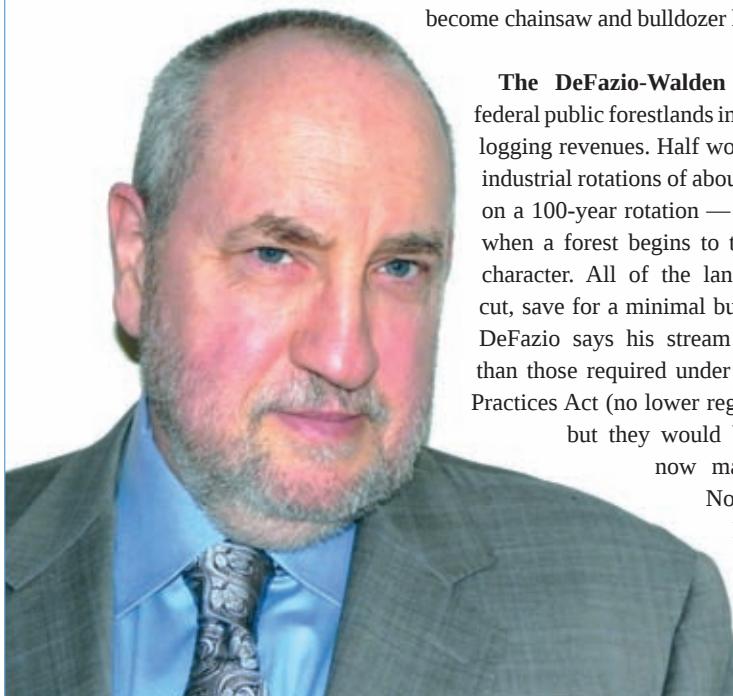

After I'd heard that a hedge fund manager was spending big bucks in 2012 to convince voters to toss out Democratic U.S. Rep. Peter DeFazio, I wrote a check for thousands of dollars to DeFazio for Congress. I was terrified that Republican candidate Art Robinson would pillage the public's forests, waters and wildlife. It turns out I should have also feared the incumbent on that score.

No politician behaves as we would like 100 percent of the time and DeFazio's lifetime rating with the League of Conservation Voters is a generally laudable 90 percent. However, a national rating doesn't reflect the actions a member of Congress takes on federal matters limited to his state or congressional district.

DeFazio's response to his smallest election margin in 14 general elections was to ally with Republican Rep. Greg Walden to craft legislation that would effectively privatize 1.7 million acres of western Oregon federal public forestlands, limit the applicability of the Endangered Species and Clean Water acts and nullify the National Environmental Policy Act for those lands. Citizens would not be able to sue over harmful timber sales.

Beyond the pale for a progressive and populist Democrat, DeFazio's bill received yes votes from only 17 Democrats when it recently passed in the House. Two of Oregon's other three House Democrats voted no. Sens. Ron Wyden and Jeff Merkley say no bill like that will pass the Senate, and the White House has threatened a veto if it does. Democrat DeFazio is cavorting with the most anti-environmental of Republicans. He seeks to give away federal public lands worth $8 billion to $10 billion to become chainsaw and bulldozer habitat.

The DeFazio-Walden bill would place federal public forestlands in a trust to maximize logging revenues. Half would be managed on industrial rotations of about 40 years, and half on a 100-year rotation — just before the age when a forest begins to take on old-growth character. All of the land would be clear-cut, save for a minimal buffer along streams. DeFazio says his stream buffers are better than those required under the Oregon Forest Practices Act (no lower regulatory bar exists), but they would be half of what is now mandated under the Northwest Forest Plan. DeFazio's bill would harm salmon runs.

DeFazio said on the floor of the House, "Of the 2.8 million acres [affected by the bill], 1.2 million acres of old growth will be preserved." That is patently false. While DeFazio's bill would transfer about 976,000 acres of BLM holdings in western Oregon to the Forest Service, much of it could still be available for logging. Rather than including language in his bill to actually protect those old-growth forests, his bill would establish a commission to determine which subset of old growth would get protected. If DeFazio wanted to actually protect old growth, he could have simply legislated such.

Yes, his bill would designate 76,400 acres of BLM lands as wilderness and as wild and scenic rivers, but at the expense of 23,000 acres of new clearcuts annually. DeFazio would transfer lands along Fall Creek and around Mount June and Hardesty Mountain on the Willamette National Forest to his timber trust. His legislation would increase clear-cut logging in the Eugene and Springfield municipal watersheds, increasing treatment costs to water customers.

A political benefit of all this is that timber barons may not give money to a potential DeFazio challenger.

Designating wilderness areas in one's own congressional district is an accurate barometer of conservation credentials. DeFazio's predecessor Jim Weaver was responsible for more wilderness designations in his 12 years in Congress than DeFazio has achieved in his 27 years. DeFazio may think he represents a timber-dominated district today; Jim Weaver really did. Yet Weaver also thought of future generations and not merely of his next election.

When Weaver left Congress in 1986, DeFazio and two others vied in the Democratic primary. Most progressive organizations sat out the election as all three had comparable views on their causes. However, a small political action committee I was associated with sent a mailing saying DeFazio would be the best choice. He won that primary by a few thousand votes. Today, almost any Democratic politician would be better than DeFazio.

Some of my liberal Lane County friends say DeFazio is preferable to Art Robinson, who is, after all, bat-shit crazy. The problem with that calculus is that DeFazio is increasingly doing bat-shit crazy things — like squandering our legacy of public lands in his district and state — using up credibility that comes from not always having been totally bat-shit crazy.

Perhaps liberals who make up DeFazio's political base can be pacified by his work on other issues of importance to them, including environmental ones (he's taken a recent increased interest in imperiled wolves, none of which have made it back to the 4th District and probably won't before DeFazio leaves office). However, DeFazio recently voted to allow motorized vehicles in wilderness areas and to prevent the Environmental Protection Agency from vetoing water-quality-damaging projects, and he opposed cap-and-trade legislation, which at the time was the only politically viable opportunity to address climate change. DeFazio opposes removing salmon-killing dams on the Snake River. Yes, DeFazio still gets lots of cheers when he marches in the Eugene Celebration parade, but the cheers are for the old greener DeFazio, not the new browner one.

What will DeFazio be remembered for? Besides a record tenure as an Oregon member of the U.S. House, it all might add up to a pedestrian bridge named for him that he himself pork-barreled, 23,000 acres of new clear-cuts annually, more expensive drinking water for people, dirtier streams for fish, extinct species and squandering billions of dollars of federal assets. DeFazio certainly won't be remembered for a legacy of wilderness for this and future generations, as was his predecessor and as almost any likely successor will be.

If DeFazio's campaign treasurer has read this far, I'd like my money back.

Born and raised in Lane County, Andy Kerr (andykerr.net) consults for conservation organizations working to protect the West's wildlands, wild waters and wildlife. He splits his time between Ashland and Washington, D.C. For Kerr's detailed analysis of DeFazio's conservation record, go to andykerr.net/defazio.

Eugeneans are still pondering the boom in student housing and wondering when it will end. In light of the overbuilding (see our cover story Oct. 10) we predict several big projects on the drawing board will be shelved before groundbreaking. College enrollment has peaked, so the big out-of-state investors have been counting on drawing tenants from existing apartments and houses all over town. That's happening to a degree, but Eugene is not a typical college town. A lot of the students we know are independent, outdoorsy types who prefer a more quiet, laid-back lifestyle with dogs, cats and wooden front porches. What can rental owners around town do to better compete? They might need to rethink their pet policies, for one thing, and property management companies might need loosen up some of their adversarial policies and practices (we hear a lot of horror stories from students). And future high-rise housing developers might be wise to design a mix of units to accommodate students, families, even seniors. The demographics are changing.

Live music and activities for children are planned, and other businesses involved are Cousin Jack's Pasty Company, Organically Grown Company and Holy Cow Café. See coconutbliss.com.

National news reports tell us home mortgage rates have been climbing due in part to the improved economy, predictions of inflation, the government shutdown and speculation that the Fed will cut back on its stimulus programs. But we hear this week from local mortgage broker Nick Carter of OMT Mortgage that "rates have been creeping back downward with a 30-year fixed in the mid to lower 4 percent range and a 15-year fixed in the mid 3 percent range." Might be a good time to buy.

NEWS

MORE DETAILS Emerge IN LIANE RICHARDSON STORY

The emails read like something from the New York Post or The National Enquirer, not like messages that would be copied to the Eugene City Council, the mayor and the city manager. Former county administrator Liane Richardson's ex-husband Mark Richardson fired off a volley of angry exchanges with his ex into the public record late in the evening of Oct. 23 and kicked off an investigation by the Eugene Police Department (EPD) and more questions about Liane Richardson's tenure at Lane County.

The "he-said, she-said" argument between the Richardsons, who divorced in May, included allegations from Mark Richardson that his ex-wife had been having an affair with a Eugene police officer, Sgt. Matt Lowen, such as "according to Liane they had sex on the floor of the armory on his sweatshirt."

Mark Richardson alleged the affair with Lowen "was in part conducted during his duty hours and included sex in a shuttered county building." He also alleged the incident occurred after Liane Richardson went on a ride-along with Lowen. She responded to him and the city officials via email: "My ex has no proof of Matt Lowen and I doing anything inappropriate during Matt's work hours or in any county-owned buildings, because nothing inappropriate happened during work hours or in any publicly owned properties."

Melinda McLaughlin of the EPD says the department cannot comment ahead of the internal affairs investigation into the allegations.

Lowen was one of the officers involved in arresting homeless campers under the Ferry Street Bridge in April after police spray painted "No Trespassing" on the bridge. Liane Richardson was frequently criticized by homeless advocates for shutting down their protest at the publicly owned Wayne Morse Free Speech Plaza, a shutdown that was found to be unconstitutional. In 2010 Lowen and the city of Eugene were sued by former EWEB commissioner and current County Commission candidate Joann Ernst over a police raid on her home.

The suit sought damages for the use of "paramilitary activities, personnel, tactics and equipment" while executing a search warrant at Ernst's home. The city paid Ernst $87,000 to settle the suit.

At the county, there is no investigation yet into any possible misuse of county funds, properties or other misconduct in regard to the emails because, according to Lane County spokesperson Anne Marie Levis, "The emails didn't reference any misuse of county funds," and she adds, "Also, Ms. Richardson has been fired."

One of the county issues that did arise concerns Liane Richardson appointing Lowen, a non-county employee, to an internal committee on deferred compensation. Internal committees report to the county administrator and, according to Commissioner Pete Sorenson, often give advice on arcane technical issues. The issue of improperly using deferred compensation is part of what led to Liane Richardson's termination three months ago.

Sorenson says Liane Richardson did not leave a list of how many internal committees she had, who was on them and if any other non-county employees were appointed. Acting County Administrator Alicia Hays is now trying to make such a list, Sorenson says.

On Nov. 3, Sorenson wrote an email to board Chair Sid Leiken that cited the "virtual refusal of the Board of Commissioners to oversee the operation of the county government." He said the board over-delegated to the former county administrator and "time after time refused reasonable requests by me to improve this situation."

Sorenson says he thinks it's "worthwhile to express outrage at some of these revelations, particularly the point I raised about the abuse of the process involving the deferred compensation matter."

At the Nov. 5 commission meeting, in response to Sorenson's email, the board discussed such issues as the politicization of the county administrator's position, or as he says, "the political way she did her job," and the county's failure to appoint an independent performance auditor. Sorenson says an internal auditor program is funded in the 2013-2014 county budget, but it's not clear if an auditor will be appointed and who that person would report to — the commissioners or the county administrator. — Camilla Mortensen

IT'S ABOUT TIME

BY DAVID WAGNER

This fall there is a new flock of nine turkeys that circulate through our neighborhood, snooping down our street every other day. Their core must come from the ones that nested on the butte above our home this past spring. The turkey chicks that left the nest in April are now the size of their parents. We are not sure what they find to eat in their foraging; hope their menu includes slugs and snails.

All our garden hoses are rolled up and watering timers put away. I haven't drained the mower yet because the warm fall might keep grass growing for another few weeks. The zucchini in the garden yielded their last three fingers as I pulled the vines up for compost. I like zucchini because they don't have to ripen; they taste good from peanut size on.

Working in the garden along the street creates opportunity to talk to neighbors who walk by. It is interesting how folks seem comfortable asking about what I'm growing or comment on the nice pea trellis I have. It would seem that gardening in front of your home is a basic, ancient form of social media.

Leaves fall from our broadleaf trees in November having gone through their best colors in October. Parasites and symbionts like the gall wasps on oaks and tar spot fungi in bigleaf maple will wait out their dormant stage in decaying leaves on the ground. If the leaves get raked up, their life cycle is broken.

CAPSTONE CONSTRUCTION UNDER LABOR INVESTIGATION

Construction on Capstone's 13th and Olive student housing project is continuing, but representatives from the Pacific Northwest Regional Council of Carpenters (PNWRCC) say that after complaints from workers employed by multiple contractors, the Oregon Bureau of Labor and Industries (BOLI) and other agencies are investigating the project.

"We had a lot of workers come forward complaining about unpaid overtime, checks being withheld, oftentimes for weeks or even a month at a time, and the various sanitary and safety complaints," PNWRCC spokesperson Ben Basom says. General contractor Construction Enterprises Inc. (CEI) of Franklin, Tenn., is overseeing the project, but Basom says that the ultimate responsibility falls on Capstone as the development owner.

According to Basom, the availability of adequate bathroom facilities was one problem. "The bathtubs in some of the units being used as toilets. People were urinating and defecating inside the bathrooms there," he says. "People were urinating inside the walls to avoid having to take bathroom breaks and things like that."

An orange flier posted around downtown asks unhappy workers on the Capstone project to call the local PNWRCC office at 344-5344. The flier asks workers if they were paid in cash, not paid overtime or denied breaks, and says "You may be owed money!"

Capstone's Eugene spokesperson, Pat Walsh, says, "Until late last week, Capstone and CEI were not aware of the union's allegations concerning subcontractors working on the site. The union has refused our request to review their report; however, Capstone and CEI do take the allegations seriously."

PNWRCC has received a lot of verbal complaints from workers who wish to remain anonymous and four or five formal written complaints, Basom says. "Oftentimes these workers work under a culture of fear," he says.

MICHELE NORRIS

NPR'S RACE CARD PROJECT IN EUGENE

"Black man interrogated. White mom ignored," McKenzie Messer. "I don't exist for your curiosity," Gordon Nagayama Hall. "Where are you from? No. Really?" Alisa Caban.

NPR special correspondent Michele Norris' The Race Card project asks people to explore their thoughts about race, ethnicity and cultural identity in six words. Norris has been collecting these stories for three years and some have been heard, and the longer stories behind them told, on public radio's Morning Edition. Norris brings these stories to the University of Oregon on Nov. 13 and is asking Oregonians for their six-word stories.

Rita Radostitz of the UO's Division of Student Affairs says the impetus to bring Norris to campus stemmed from an R-G article on The Race Card Project last year. Radostitz says that Norris' talk and UO's participation in the project are part of a yearlong exploration of identity through the school's Center on Diversity and Community. Topics for the year will include race, gender, sexuality, ethnicity and more, and a TEDxUOregon is planned for the spring with "ideas worth sharing" focusing on identity and creativity.

Radostitz says about 150 race cards have already been submitted, and the school is pushing for more. The UO currently has a page on theracecardproject.com with submissions. Radostitz wrote and posted two six-word stories of her own, "Parenting through a prism of race," and "This mother's eyes see race differently." Radostitz is the mother of twin daughters who are Ethiopian by birth, "so I am constantly having to take race into account in my parenting," she says.

Norris will speak 7 pm Wednesday, Nov. 13, at the UO's Erb Memorial Union Ballroom. The free tickets are sold out, but the event will be a livestream at the EMU, and there is a waiting list for possible tickets. Local NPR affiliate KLCC will simulcast Norris' appearance on OPB's Think Out Loud from the UO campus at noon.

ACTIVIST ALERT

• ODOT is holding a series of open houses about intercity passenger rail service between the Eugene-Springfield area and Portland-Vancouver, Wash., and providing input on the evaluation results. The next meeting will be from 5 to 7 pm Thursday, Nov. 7, at the Linn-Benton Community College Calapooia Center, 6500 Pacific Blvd. SW in Albany. See OregonPassengerRail.org or contact Jill Pearson, (503) 986-3313 or info@oregonpassengerrail.org.

• "GMOs: State or Local Control" is the topic at City Club of Eugene at noon Friday, Nov. 8, at the Hilton lobby level. Guest speakers will include George Grier, treasurer of the Lane County Farm Bureau, and Ann Kneeland of Support Local Food Rights. $5 for non-members.

• The Lane County Budget Committee's South Eugene citizen position will be vacant at the end of the year. Commissioner Pete Sorenson says he expects he will be evaluating applicants for this position and making a recommendation on who the board will appoint. It's a three-year appointment, starting no earlier than Jan. 1. No formal application process is yet in place but those interested can check the county website or email pete.sorenson@co.lane.or.us.

• About three dozen local activists in Eugene, Springfield and Corvallis have been trained to participate in civil disobedience as part of the national 350.org campaign. The final training will be from 11:30 am to 6:30 pm Saturday, Nov. 16, at First United Methodist Church, 1376 Olive St. in Eugene. Actions are being planned in case President Obama takes steps toward approving the Keystone XL Pipeline. The White House is under extreme pressure from industry and conservatives in Congress to facilitate a pipeline that environmentalists say would exacerbate climate change. Local action leaders are Deb McGee and Patty Hine and they can be contacted by email at stopkeystonexnow@gmail.com or sign the "Pledge of Resistance" and learn more at 350.org.

In our story Oct. 24, "Lighting Plan Aims to Enliven Dark Downtown," we incorrectly identified Light Beam Industries as a Springfield firm. The company is actually located across from Costco on Chad Drive in Eugene. See lightbeamindustries.com or call 228-3650.

URSULA K. LE GUIN TO SPEAK FOR CSWS ANNIVERSARY

She writes about politics, religion, sexuality and gender — all in unreal worlds through the controversial genre of science fiction — and contests the conventional rules of grammar. Ursula K. Le Guin's distinct style has been recognized and awarded for decades, and she will speak 6:30 to 9 pm Friday, Nov. 8, at UO's EMU Ballroom for the 40th Anniversary Celebration of the Center for the Study of Women in Society, the organization that has funded and supported feminist scholarship at UO. The CSWS celebration kicks off Thursday, Nov. 7, with a screening of Agents of Change, a documentary about the center, and continues Friday with the "Women's Stories, Women's Lives" symposium and Saturday with the "Worlds Beyond World" symposium (more details at wkly.ws/1lg).

CSWS was born out of an endowment from Fortune magazine editor William Harris in 1983 in memory of his wife, Jane Grant, a feminist and co-founder of The New Yorker, and has flourished over the years, providing grants and scholarships to faculty and graduate students and promoting the study of women, girls and their communities. For its 40th anniversary, the center will found the Le Guin Feminist Science Fiction Fellowship. EW caught up with Le Guin to ask about writing and reading.

With all the debate over which authors are truly writing science fiction and which aren't, how would you personally define this genre? Why do you think some authors deny their work follows this style?

Defining science fiction is a quicksand in which many brave cowboys have perished along with their horses. I ain't going there. The reason some people write fiction that does things science fiction does — mutants, time travel, other planets, post-holocaust Earth, etc. — and then deny that it's science fiction is that they want to be reviewed by critics and given prizes by judges. A lot of critics and judges still insist that Realism is the only kind of fiction that should be called literature — usually because they have never read anything else, poor things.

In an interview with Wired last year, you talked about the use of "they" as the gender-neutral pronoun. What do you think about introducing "ze" or "zhe" as the gender-neutral pronoun in writing these days?

Just what I thought about it 40 years ago when I was writing about genderless people in The Left Hand of Darkness. Invented pronouns don't work. They can work in an experiment or a lesson, but not in a novel. Pronouns go too deep in the structure of the language. "They" as a singular is much older than the "rules" forbidding us to use "they" as a singular, and has always been used in spoken English. It sounds perfectly natural to anybody who hasn't had their brain washed by a pedant.

You've said you get a lot of moral guidance from reading novels and expect to offer some as well. What kind of guidance would you hope that is? What kind of messages would you like for your readers to take away from your works?

Did I say I hoped to offer moral guidance? I did? What was I thinking?! I never hoped anything of the sort that I know of. I have no messages. I tell stories. Of course I've gotten moral guidance from novels, everybody who reads good novels does. (I have to say "good novels," meaning fiction that doesn't merely cater to the author's or the reader's immediate wish-fulfillment.) I worry about people who don't read novels. Where do they find out about how good people act, or what it feels like to try to do right? Not from history, or politics, or the stock market report, that's for sure.

SLANT

• Welcome to our annual Best of Eugene issue, sometimes affectionately called the "Beast of Eugene" since it is our biggest honking issue of the year and demands brain-numbing weeks of labor by our writers and photogs, and thousands of ballots submitted by our readers. This is our fattest Beast issue ever at 76 pages with near-record ad revenue, so we have to thank our loyal advertisers as well. They recognize that EW print ads provide the most bang for the buck. You simply have to be in EW to build a crowd for your business or event.

We often hear, "Wow, you have a lot of ads; you must be making a big profit," but the truth is we break even most years. The cost of producing, printing and distributing up to 40,000 free papers 52 times a year is about $1.4 million. On good years we match that, 2013 is turning out to be one of those years and we're grateful. To borrow from Woody Allen, love is too weak a word for how we feel about our readers and advertisers. We lurve you as we charge ahead in our 31st year.

• We came away from the City Club of Eugene debate on Nov. 1 unpersuaded that this city should continue MUPTE, the multiple-unit property tax exemption that is disliked by citizens who care where our taxes go. Even if you do want to extend MUPTE, ostensibly to increase downtown density, the central questions should be, "Would the project be built without tax breaks?" and, "If not, would it matter?" Add to that the issue of design standards: Eugene has none and MUPTE hasn't helped.

• The Duck men basketballers play their first game against Georgetown this Friday. Georgetown has a strong team and it should be a great game, but why are they playing at Camp Humphreys, a U.S. military base outside Seoul, South Korea? Even in the wacky world of big-time college sports, it seems odd to fly college students to Korea to play a basketball game. It may be good for the soldiers on the base, but what about school? The Ducks reportedly left town on Tuesday to travel to Seoul, which is roughly 5,000 miles from here. What about the carbon footprint? One person flying round trip from Eugene to Seoul pumps about 4,600 pounds of CO₂ into the atmosphere, more than the average American car generates in six months! If we're ever going to get serious about protecting our climate, we might start by asking if we really need to send college students halfway around the globe to play a basketball game.

• Rep. Peter DeFazio's O&C Trust, Conservation, and Jobs Act has made it through the House, and timber companies and enviros alike are waiting to see what Sen. Ron Wyden will do in the Senate. Actually, they are not waiting: Facebook ads have popped up, along with a sign at the Eugene airport and now a billboard in Glenwood, all in opposition to plans to split the O&C lands into a timber trust and a conservation trust and increase logging on the federal lands. According to Shannon Wilson of Eco Advocates NW who put up the billboard: "We need bold vision and leadership from Oregon's senators and congressmen that will not only protect threatened species but in doing so quickly transition Oregon's economy away from destructive and irreversible extraction processes towards a recreation and ecosystem sustaining based economic system."

YEPSA HOSTS FIRST YOUTH EMPOWERMENT SYMPOSIUM

Just over three years ago, Elliot Glaser-Flynn enrolled at Network Charter School and joined Youth for the Education and Prevention of Sexual Assault (YEPSA), a group whose mission is to end gender violence through education and action. Now, at 18, he's the project manager of the first ever Youth Empowerment Symposium, which will take place Sunday and Monday, Nov. 10-11, at the Hilton downtown. The event will include 12 workshops, meals, a keynote presentation by Cree Gordon and a concert Sunday evening at WOW Hall.

Glaser-Flynn was inspired to put together an event like this after traveling to the Adolescent Sexuality Conference in Seaside to present a workshop and recognizing there was no equivalent event in Lane County. He approached Denise Velasco, vice president of YEPSA, and for the past two years, the duo has been fundraising and coordinating to put on this event. They are expecting to see about 75 youths at the symposium.

"We've received an overwhelming amount of support from the community," says Velasco, who has collected contributions from Oregon Country Fair, Equity, PFLAG, the city of Eugene, Network Charter School, Oregon Safe Schools and Symantec. Thanks to these contributions, YEPSA has been able to provide free attendance through scholarships to all of the attendees of the symposium and still has many scholarships to give out. Other organizations, such as Planned Parenthood, HIV Alliance and Ophelia's Place are contributing time either through presentations or tabling.

YEPSA holds other events throughout the year, including an annual play — this year entitled It's Easy to Do: What Makes Them Happy — that is written, directed and produced entirely by youth. Rehearsals are held weekly at 4 pm Thursdays, and YEPSA's meetings are 3:30 pm Tuesdays at Network Charter School, 2550 Portland St. Both are open to the public. ACTIVISTS URGE PURCHASE OF AMAZON HEADWATERS

The Amazon Creek Headwaters appear doomed following the latest Oregon Court of Appeals decision, but local folks who have been fighting for more than a decade to preserve this pristine area next to the Ridgeline Trail have not given up. They are urging citizens to email or write the Eugene City Council to ask them to set aside the money that is in the voter-approved city parks bond for natural areas to purchase at least 18 of the 47 acres owned by Martin

POLLUTION UPDATE (BEST OF EDITION)

The most common type of Clean Water Act discharge permit in Oregon is the one for facilities that discharge industrial stormwater. In Lane County, about 120 facilities discharge to local waters pursuant to this permit, and these facilities are required to monitor their discharges four times a year and submit monitoring results to regulatory authorities (either DEQ or the city of Eugene) by July 31 each year. Monitoring results for 2012-13 are in, and while the pollution discharges for the majority of local facilities were below benchmark levels, the following facilities had the worst reported discharges: Gheen Irrigation Works' Lake Eugene facility on Airport Road discharged copper at more than 18 times the applicable benchmark and oil and grease at over two times the applicable benchmark; Ecosort discharged lead at almost three times the applicable benchmark at its Glenwood facility; Gibson Steel Fabricating discharged zinc at over 51 times the applicable benchmark at its facility near 2nd and Washington; Extreme Technologies' Bowtech Archery facility on Highway 99 discharged suspended solids at 10.5 times the applicable benchmark; Attune Foods reported discharges with acidity similar to that of lemon juice.

and Leslie Beverly. The family is reportedly asking $2.5 million for the 18 wooded acres.

"This is not just a southeast Eugene issue," says Emily Fox, one of the opponents of development. "Leaving a green belt of natural area around Eugene will help slow global warming," she says. "This is also the only park area accessible by foot, bike and bus."

Opponents say development of this area will heavily impact the Amazon Creek, which flows into Fern Ridge Reservoir, the Long Tom River and ultimately the Willamette. All these waterways are already compromised. The Amazon Headwaters were originally zoned forest/agriculture and were changed to residential single family about 30 years ago. "At that time the public was not as educated about the value of headwaters, wetlands, natural resources and open space issues," Fox says.

Dan Snyder is the attorney for Southeast Neighbors and says that there are too many inherent problems with developing the property, from the presence of the headwaters to the steep slopes prone to erosion. Snyder says another key point is that "it is the Amazon Headwaters, an outstanding natural resource that the city should be protecting, not turning over to the developers to turn into upper-scale homes."

The Be Noble Foundation also has been raising money to aid in the purchase of 26 acres of the Amazon Headwaters. See an earlier story on the property at wkly.ws/1m7 and find out more about the foundation at be-noble.org. — Ted Taylor

SPRINGFIELD COACH GETS TO SEE RUSSELL'S FIRST BIG TEST

Mercedes Russell may have gone from Springfield to Tennessee, but she will have some of her hometown's support system with her as she starts her collegiate career at one of the biggest powerhouses in women's basketball. Bill Wagner, her former head coach at Springfield High, will be in attendance when the Lady Volunteers take on the North Carolina Tar Heels in Chapel Hill, N.C., on Nov. 11 in a battle of top-10 teams. And he couldn't be more excited to see her in action on the big stage.

"She's meant so much to me as far as being able to watch her grow and develop as a young woman and player," Wagner says. "I felt like I wanted to make sure I saw one of her first college games. It would mean a lot for her, but also it means a lot for us just to go and be able to support her. She traveled cross-country for college and I think it would be nice for her to see some familiar faces."

Basketball fans not familiar with Russell will be soon. A versatile forward who excels both inside and out on offense, she was considered the nation's top recruit in the class of 2013 by espnW. This came as no surprise to Wagner, who coached her from her sophomore season on.

"When she was in high school she was so dominant, so ahead of the curve," he says. "It will be nice to see her play on kind of an even playing field. I'm just excited to see her. We miss her around here. You could never miss her here on campus, being 6'6", but just getting go out there and spend some time with her I'm looking forward to that."

Wagner was not specifically invited to the game against North Carolina by Tennessee; instead, he is taking advantage of the three-day Veterans Day weekend to make the trip with an assistant coach.

"She's gone through being one of the top recruits in the nation, and having high expectations on her," Wagner says. "She's got such a calm demeanor about her that she takes things in stride and goes about her business and doesn't let a lot of the peripheral stuff bother her. She has this inner drive to succeed and be as good as she possibly can."

And Wagner will be there to watch Russell and her new team as she tries to continue her success in her first big test against one of the game's most formidable opponents. — Nick Poust

FOR MANY, "religion" is a bad word, and, let's be honest, deservedly so. But what if the religionists themselves have gotten it largely wrong? What if God is better and more real than even his most zealous advocates have suggested? What then? The answer is really good news. We'd love for you to come and see.

The BEST OF EUGENE 2013-2014

Thanks for voting, Eugene!

Turnout for the 2013-14 readers poll was high, and so was the quality of your answers. (But thanks for all the “your mom” votes — our moms are The Best!) We had a chuckle at the “Art Robinson for Best Comedian” campaign. We were glad that more people voted for real Best Places to Eat with Kids instead of treating tykes like tiny pariahs and telling parents to stay home. And we loved hearing your thoughts on the past year’s best people and controversies. Read on to find more of Eugene to love.

Now it’s time to party. Meet us at Level Up Arcade, 1290 Oak St., from 7 to 9 pm Thursday, Nov. 7. We’ll have free food from local restaurants, a DJ, live music and a video game photo booth for guests. Under 21 allowed until 9 pm. Admission is free, but we’re selling raffle tickets to benefit the Best Nonprofit winner, so bring a few bucks if you have it.

MORTALS IN COMBAT

(CIVICS)

BEST LOCAL HELL-RAISER

1. Alley Valkyrie
2. Lefty Kelleher
3. Occupy Eugene

If you’ve been to city or county meetings, you’ve probably seen and heard Alley Valkyrie. If you’ve read the paper in the past two years, you’ve encountered her. Valkyrie’s take-no-prisoners approach to arguing for human rights for the unhoused — the right to sleep, the right to use a bathroom — has pissed off plenty of politicians but also made them respect and listen to her and to the members of Occupy Eugene and of SLEEPS (Safe Legally Entitled Emergency Places to Sleep). Valkyrie says, “I’m glad I’ve set a good example of raising hell, but it’s unfortunate that anyone has to raise hell in order to secure basic human rights.”

KITTY PIERCY

BEST LOCAL POLITICO

1. Kitty Piercy mayor of Eugene
2. Peter DeFazio U.S. House rep., Oregon’s 4th District
3. Pete Sorenson Lane County commissioner, 3rd District

Mayor Kitty Piercy has been gaining momentum since her overwhelming election win last year. She championed downtown revitalization and supported respectable options for the city’s homeless, making a statement at the opening of Opportunity Village. She’s visible even for a political figure, making a point of attending nearly every Eugene event that matters, from bar crawls to the SLUG queen coronation.

EUGENEAN OF THE YEAR: 2013

STAFF PICKS

WORST PLAGUE AROUND TOWN

It seemed to happen out of nowhere. Boom! John Henry's was gone. We whined and grieved and had finally gotten back up on our dancing feet when SLAM! Diablo's announced they would be closing down soon too. What is this with big local bars closing?! I'll tell 'ya, if they even think about touching Cowfish, I'll lose all hope for this one-horse town.

BEST BARF IN EUGENE

No, it's not the spectacle that is UO freshmen stumbling around the campus neighborhood nor your toilet bowl after that fourth meal run to Taco Bell, but instead the fascinating winged creatures at Cascade Raptor Center, some of which use vomit as a defense mechanism. This destination is tucked into the hills of South Eugene and Tuesday through Friday at noon you can learn the ins and outs of different species during the handler talks. Hopefully you won't actually witness any bird vomiting, but you just might get to see a bird of prey eat an entire dead baby chick — bones and all.

BEST PLACE TO DO IT DIRTY IN THE DARK

Just admit it! As weird and twisted as it is, we've all had thoughts of sneaking a quickie atop a tombstone in the middle of a cemetery. And while Eugene's Pioneer Cemetery is often the first one that pops into mind around town, its foliage is sparse and if you're going to have an audience at all, you sure don't want it to be the frat boys wandering down 18th. So grab your sweetie (or maybe just the closest stranger in the bar) and head south to Masonic Cemetery for a little rule-breaking. It's remote, secluded and, most importantly, creepy as all get out.

BEST NEW BIKE PATH IN THE AREA

A new four-mile paved path opened in October along the Willamette from Dorris Ranch to Clearwater Park. The Middle Fork Path connects to the Eugene-Springfield riverfront bike path system by a bike lane on South Second Street in Springfield. Eventually we might see a bike bridge over the Willamette to connect the new path with Buford and Mount Pisgah. Meanwhile, enjoy the ride, or walk through an area that was previously inaccessible except by boat.

BEST WAY TO IMPROVE SOUTH WILLAMETTE STREET

Get rid of all those dangerous, redundant driveways that cause accidents and throw in some bike lanes and a center turn lane. This street could be much safer, easier to navigate by car and more fun to bike on with a few little changes.

BEST LOCAL UPROAR

1. SLEEPS/homeless protests
2. Occupy Eugene
3. Liane Richardson

SLEEPS has frequently been described as an offshoot of last year's best uproar winner Occupy Eugene, and while it is certainly born of the energy and the community, as well as the focus on the needs of those without food, medical care and safe shelter of Occupy, SLEEPS is an uproar all its own. The group has camped out in — and been booted out of — the Wayne Morse Free Speech Plaza, raising civil liberties issues of having a place to raise a voice in protest against the government, in addition to the human rights focus of having a safe place to sleep. SLEEPS has also staged both pop-up camps and long-term camps all over Eugene. The organization will not rest while the unhoused of Eugene don't have a safe place to lay their heads. SLEEPS member Alley Valkyrie says, "I look forward to a day where we start putting people over profit and we don't see a group of people fighting for the right to sleep as an 'uproar.'"

Occupy Eugene comes in second place this year and third place is fired county administrator Liane Richardson, known not only for her attempts to raise her $150,000-a-year salary at a time when Lane County is hurting for money, but also for shutting down the Free Speech Plaza, which led to the arrest of more than 20 SLEEPS members. The charges were later dropped when the shutting down of the plaza was found to be unconstitutional. Richardson made headlines post-BOE voting with allegations of inappropriate hook-ups with a cop on county property.

BEST NONPROFIT

1. FOOD For Lane County foodforlanecounty.org.
2. Greenhill Humane Society green-hill.org.
3. Planned Parenthood plannedparenthood.org.

FOOD For Lane County doesn't just find food to distribute to the community. They find local solutions to the "protein shortage" in food options for the county. According to Dawn Marie Woodward, media relations coordinator for FFLC, the focus for this year has been intentional food production, to build on the 8 million pounds of food they distributed last year — a record for the nonprofit. FFLC has connected with local farmers to create packs of instant refried beans, applesauce and a chili made from local lentils and barley, all of which is distributed through food pantries and distribution programs throughout the county. "We know solving the hunger program has to be local," Woodward says, and FFLC embodies that goal.

BEST LGBT GROUP OR ADVOCATE

1. Basic Rights Oregon basicrights.org.
2. HIV Alliance hivalliance.org.
3. Soromundi Lesbian Chorus of Eugene wkly.
ws/1lr.

The rockstars at Basic Rights Oregon can't be stopped. While BRO can't take credit for the Oregon United for Marriage campaign (it can't run a political campaign as a nonprofit), the group is popularly considered to be the campaign's driving force. A popular vote in November 2014 could modify our state constitution, nixing the 2004 Measure 36, "Oregon's DOMA," which defined marriage as between a man and a woman. BRO and its allies have until July to reach the signature threshold, but they insist on doing so by this December. Good hustle, bruh. Basic Rights Oregon also has a growing focus on transgender and racial justice and will continue to amplify the agency of its intersectional lives. Eugene is host to the only BRO office outside of Portland and, wow, do they make it count.

BEST ENVIRO ORGANIZATION

1. BRING bringrecycling.org.
2. Cascadia Wildlands cascwild.org.
3. Cascadia Forest Defenders forestdefensenow.com.

BRING Recycling near Glenwood has an amazing and highly organized collection of building supplies and other discarded materials that come in handy for not only remodeling and new construction but also art projects. BRING has evolved beyond recycling to programs that encourage people and businesses to prevent materials from going into the wastestream in the first place.

Cascadia Wildlands is a professionally staffed enviro group working on preserving threatened areas and wildlife throughout the Cascadia bioregion from Oregon to Alaska. Cascadia Forest Defenders is a grassroots group of volunteers that organizes nonviolent protests (including tree-sits) and lobbies and supports other groups to protect shrinking old-growth habitats in the Cascades.

MIDNIGHT'S MADNESS

BEST BEERS ON TAP

1. The Bier Stein 1591 Willamette St. 485-2437.
thebierstein.com.
2. Ninkasi Brewing Tasting Room 272 Van Buren St. 344-2739. ninkasibrewing.com.
3. 16 Tons 265 E. 13th Ave. 345-2003. sixteentons.biz

It's doubtful anyone was upset about The Bier Stein's move from East 11th to its new location on Willamette. Not only did the floor space increase, but the presentation of The Bier Stein's beer wall shines as a beacon to brew lovers. The addition of display screens showing 24 beers on tap (including two nitro taps) and tweets and check-ins from customers keeps the crowd informed. In addition to a mainly regional selection of brews, the Stein is stocked with international beers and specialties, such as gluten-free beers. There is something for everyone, from the pedestrian drinker to the connoisseur, and that's likely what keeps at least a few dozen people in the building.

BEST BURGER & BREW SPECIAL

1. Cornucopia 295 W. 17th Ave. 485-2300; 207 E. 5th Ave. 485-2676; cornucopiaeugene.com.
2. The Vintage 837 Lincoln St. 349-9181. thevintageeugene.com.
3. Izakaya Meiji 345 Van Buren St. 505-8804. izakayameiji.com.

Cornucopia, with two homey locations, continues to hold the top spot, and for good reason. Its burgers are scrumptious, made daily with fresh beef supplied by Knee Deep Cattle Company. The cows are pampered, grass fed and 100 percent free-range, and delightful to us meat-eaters. Dive into everything from the Lil' Jack's Hellion

Burger with a green chili vibe and Jeros' Bacon Cheese Burger (bacon, need I say more?) to the Big Baby Bleu Burger, among other delicious options capable of satisfying your meat-craving palate. Four vegetarian vurger options, handmade from local tempeh and black beans, mean that everyone has a seat at the table.

BEST COCKTAILS

3. The Vintage 837 Lincoln St. 349-9181. thevintageeugene.com.

Wier's cocktails are the perfect way to ease into Winter.

The bartenders mix pre-Prohibition drinks, manager Chad Kushuba says, and the blend of flavors in each drink has been perfectly planned. The bottles create an impressive display behind the bar, and the menu boasts more than 100 whiskeys in this low-lit, intimate cabin-esque restaurant. It's hipster meets country, East meets West and simple, smart ingredients meet complex, full flavors.

There's a certain gravity to being beer-loving Eugene's biggest brewery. Ninkasi soaks up the love and then feeds it back to us in a fermented mix, hosting Monday night "Pints for a Cause" events and giving back through the "Beer is Love" program. Whether you love the hoppy goodness of Total Domination IPA or the dessert-like Oatis Oatmeal Stout is more of your jam, you know your beer money is going to a community-conscious brewery.

BEST LOCAL COMEDIAN

1. Alex Elkin
2. Leigh Ann Jasheway
3. Josh Finch

What once began as something that got you kicked out of class for disrupting students can now function as an active profession. Comedy isn't for everyone (just ask Carlos Mencia) and comedy scenes can't be found in every community. But with the upcoming NW Women's Comedy Festival and the UO student group The Stand-up Society's formation last year, Eugene is lucky to have a growing comedic scene full of exciting comedians. Better known as "Beans," Alex Elkin is one of the three voices that act as potent laughing gas on radio station All Comedy 1450. One of his partners, Chris Warren, notes that Elkin shines because of "his ability to adapt to an audience. He can read the audience and that's something that most comedians don't have the ability to do."

BEST OPEN JAM/OPEN MIC NIGHT

1. Cozmic 199 W. 8th Ave. 338-9333. cozmicpresents.com.
2. Sam Bond's Garage 407 Blair Blvd. 343-2635. sambonds.com.
3. Diablo's Downtown Lounge 959 Pearl St. 343-2346. diabloseugene.com.

For those vocalists who are ready to trade in their hairbrushes for real microphones, Cozmic's open mic night is a friendly atmosphere that offers local performers 8 to 10 minutes of fame in front of a live audience. On Wednesdays from 7 to 10 pm, host Edgar Lopez welcomes up to 15 people of all ages to perform spoken word, stand-up comedy or any genre of music. "It's a drop of different flavors for the community," Lopez says. "Every night it's different. Not only are the performers the ones going up and having fun but it's also the crowd." Lopez says the lively atmosphere where the performers are the main attraction on a real stage, rather than just background music, is really what sets Cozmic's open mic night apart. So for those who are ready to make a live debut, leave your audience of shampoo bottles and stuffed animals at home and take your place in the limelight for a night.

BEST PLACE TO SING KARAOKE

1. Oak St. Speakeasy 915 Oak St. 284-4000. oakstreetspeakeasy.com.
2. (tie) Black Forest 50 E. 11th Ave. 686-6619. blackforesteugene.com; Cornucopia 207 E. 5th Ave. 485-2676. cornucopiaeugene.com.

While in a bar or social setting, you have few options to make yourself noticeable to that cutie sitting in the back booth sipping on a gin and tonic. Walking up unannounced and introducing yourself can be tricky, and this is why we have Oak St. Speakeasy, Cornucopia and Black Forest and their stellar karaoke nights. Backed by a single beam of light shining upon a stage with just a microphone and teleprompter at your command, karaoke can turn you from unnoticed zero into a Robert De Niro with just the simple play of Flight of the Concords' "The Most Beautiful Girl (In the Room)."

BEST PLACE TO DRINK IN THE SUN

BEST STREET TO GET RUN OVER ON YOUR BIKE

We love biking, but seriously, we could do without the near-death experiences. On 18th, the collision of turn lanes, parking lots and coffee-guzzling drivers in the morning makes things a bit tense for bikers. To the lady in the SUV turning in to the Safeway parking lot who slammed on her brakes within inches of flattening a biker — please put down the cell phone and give a quick glance to the bike lane before turning. We'd appreciate it.

BEST LOCALLY MADE WHOLE WHEAT BREAD WITH FIGS AND FILBERTS IN IT

Try the Metropol Bakery and coffee shop on South Willamette. The little loaf is so tasty.

BEST FRESH SCONES ON A RIDICULOUSLY EARLY MORNING

In the winter, the prospect of waking up for an early morning ski on the weekend seems great, until it's 5 am and the outside world seems cold and cruel compared to the coziness of the bed. Sometimes the littlest things can make the trip worth it, like Eugene City Bakery's scones. Nothing else really matters when you've got fluffy scones with gooey marionberries to devour. Thanks, Eugene City Bakery, for motivating us to get out there and brave the cold weather.

BEST REASON TO ALLOW OIL TRAINS THROUGH EUGENE

The oil spills will keep the coal dust down.

BEST PLACE FOR PIZZA AFTER A HIKE

Tucked away out Jasper Lowell Road in Fall Creek is the Fall Creek Market and Pizza, where you can get simply amazing pizza from the "chicken bacon artichoke" to the gourmet vegetarian featuring cauliflower, carrots, broccoli, mushrooms, black olives, red onions, red and yellow peppers, artichoke hearts, sun-dried tomatoes and garlic. The market is kind of a trek from Eugene — almost 20 minutes from downtown — but the rich, cheesy goodness is a perfect reward after a day hiking the old-growth forests around Fall Creek in the Willamette National Forest. Fall Creek Market and Pizza has been around since the 1900s; we don't know when the folks there started selling pizza, but they have perfected the art. For the menu, go to fallcreekmarket.com or just drive out to 39074 Jasper Lowell Rd., Fall Creek, 746-3068.

3. Beppe & Gianni's 1646 E. 19th Ave. 683-6661. beppeandgiannis.net.

It's the stuff of adolescent fantasy — little round tables with white cloth covers and a waxy beacon placed dead center. But if you ask the staff, they'll tell you the real smooching happens in the groovy alcove by the window.

Belly fools the best of us. It's casual upon first glance but swanky when you think about it. The ambiguous aesthetic just works. There are enough obscure menu items to impress but enough familiar ones not to impose. From Slavic to Saharan, there is something for everybody and the menu changes often. As owner/chef Brendan Mahaney says, excited about the dropping temperatures outside, "It's time for Jerusalem artichokes, persimmons, duck confit, pomegranates ..." All this and more for the one you adore.

BEST BAR GRUB

1. The Horsehead Bar 99 W. Broadway. 683-3154. horseheadbareugene.com.
2. Falling Sky Brewing 1334 Oak Alley. 505-7096; 790 Blair Blvd. 653-9167. fallingskybrewing.com.
3. Jackalope Lounge 453 Willamette St. 485-1519. jackalopelounge.com.

Is it the collard greens? The big burgers? Maybe, but for us it's the nachos that really put the Horsehead over the top when it comes to bar grub. There's a lot of good late-night eats around Eugene, and a lot of amazing places to have good food and a cocktail, but the Horsehead is our default when we hit that "Oh shit, I need to eat something hot and fried to take the edge off all that whiskey I just drank" point in the night. The added bonus is that if you get the nachos (and yes, you can get them without meat for all you drunk vegetarians out there) the salsa is so damn garlicky that you will hold vampires and potentially unpleasant suitors at bay for the rest of the night.

BEST DIVE BAR

1. Tiny Tavern 394 Blair Blvd. 687-8383.
2. Luckey's Club Cigar Store 933 Olive St. 687-4643. luckeysclub.com.
3. Jackalope Lounge 453 Willamette St. 485-1519. jackalopelounge.com.

When we say "best dive bar," we mean one you can dive right into and enjoy yourself. The Tiny Tavern has undergone an excellent makeover, transforming from "urinal cake" to "I would eat cake if served there," all the while keeping its working-class flavor.

A Tracy Sydor creation could easily fall out of the pages of Vanity Fair: Her photos are powerful, polished and high fashion. But Sydor doesn't shoot celebrities; she shoots the women of our fair valley. "If you have the ability to make someone feel on top of the world, do it," Sydor says. "The everyday woman in fashion poses? That comes directly from being pissed off so many times in the supermarket and seeing these magazines with skinny girls." With her high-gloss appeal, it's hard to believe that Sydor has only been clicking away since 2006, when her husband Rob Sydor (also a photographer) encouraged her to pick up a camera. "He taught me every single thing I know." Sydor is excited for what the future holds. "I'm moving towards fine art and putting on big productions," she says, adding that she'd love to have a 30-person-plus creative team. Could there be a Factory a la Andy Warhol in Eugene's future?

Before hordes of Eugeneans make the trek to Autzen Stadium in the rainy late fall, many make a similar trip across the Willamette to see a show of a different kind. Tucked behind Alton Baker Park, Cuthbert Amphitheater offers a serene retreat for live music. Perhaps Cuthbert, the sole concert amphitheater in a town that receives scarcely three months of sunshine, is the best in Eugene because it's a symbol of the fleeting summer. It's a time when a bike ride, a picnic blanket and a live concert in the park are only a thought away. This season, some of the biggest concerts of the year, David Byrne and St. Vincent, Neko Case and Edward Sharpe and the Magnetic Zeroes, have graced its stage. Whatever the reason and whatever the music, be it electronic, reggae or rock 'n' roll, the vibes and sounds of summer have become synonymous with the Cuthbert.

BEST CLUB DJ

2. DJ Crown

3. Connah J

You remember the songs but sometimes it's hard to remember the disc jockey. The club DJs are humble fellows or ladies who manage the stage with their heads drooped down, and during the show their identities remain hidden like a masked crusader of funky jams. For every DJ who settles and spins Avici's "Wake Me Up," there is a DJ that tries hard to provide the fresh vibes and keep the crowd on the dance floor. By day he's Shawn Mediast, co-owner of downtown Eugene's freakiest and grooviest club, Cowfish, but at night, Mediast transforms into Audio Schizo. "Most DJs are alone in their basement masturbating to music by themselves," says Brian Hebb, Cowfish's other owner. "Shawn looks to the crowd and responds to them."

BEST SHOW/CONCERT SINCE SEPTEMBER 2012

1. Wonderland by Work Dance Co.

2. David Byrne/St. Vincent

3. Kaleidoscope Music Festival

Move over rock stars, because dancers are taking the town by storm. Nathan Boozer, director at Work Dance Company, uses muses like Nikki Minaj, Kanye West and Lady Gaga to inspire his hip-hop dance extravaganzas. For last February's Gaga-esque Wonderland, which sold out at the Hult and both shows at Portland's Headwaters, Boozer spent 10 months choreographing, crafting props and fine-tuning lighting and multimedia backdrops to make the show really pop (lock and drop). "It's really cool because I don't know if a dance production has gotten that kind of acknowledgement here in town," Boozer says. "That's my mission, to make my dance productions a show to go see."

Next up for the company is Animal Instinct at the Hult Feb. 22 — a portion of the show's proceeds will go to Greenhill Humane Society. Can't wait that long? Work Dance performs frequently at G.L.A.M. Night and CC Slaughters in Portland.

BEST PROFESSIONAL DANCER

1. Juan Carlos Amy-Cordero

Eugene Ballet Company

2. Nate Boozer

Work Dance Co.

3. Eileen King

Unity School of Dance

Juan Carlos Amy-Cordero was more than a professional ballet dancer. He was a regal prince, a playful jokester, a youthful spirit, a passionate romantic and a strong, dynamic presence on stage and off. As a principal dancer for the Eugene Ballet Company, Amy-Cordero performed in more than 50 different ballets and dazzled audiences with his pristine form and electric charisma. He brought his passion to life with lead roles in Rite of Spring, Toni Pimble's Dark Side of the Moon, as Peter Pan, the prince in Swan Lake and Shakespeare's Romeo.

His death last June jolted the community, leaving it with a void impossible to fill. "There was no lower gear with JC. Not in the physical act of dancing, not in his mental preparation, not in his attention to detail. Never. He was fully committed to making each day the best one possible," former EBC dancer Rider Vierling wrote in the company's program. Fellow EBC dancer Mirell Sork adds, "I will never forget JC's passion and commanding presence as an artist, or the joy and humor he shared with all of us off stage. He will continue to be with us because I know we will bring his memory and spirit into our performances." Amy-Cordero is survived by his parents, his brother and sister and his wife, EBC mistress and former principal dancer Jennifer Martin. As Eugene's best professional dancer, he is, and will always be, deeply and profoundly missed.

Entering a tattoo parlor can summon those anxious adolescent insecurities that arose whenever you arrived at a new environment that was cooler and edgier than any place you'd been to before. The butterflies are already intensely flapping during the permanent placement of your first tattoo, and the demand for a friend in need can be so high that not even the sweet sorrows of James Taylor and Carole King can caress. It's these nervous feelings that fuel and propel Jimmy Singleton of The Parlour Tattoo. "He's overly nice and really goes that extra mile for his clients," says Kristian Wilson, Singleton's schedule manager and co-worker. "He makes people feel safe and turns clients into friends and makes them want to come back."

BEST KIMCHI ON HIGHWAY 58

For all we know it's the only kimchi on Hwy. 58, but if you get off I-5 at the Goshen exit and drive about a mile down 58, you'll see Lee's Highway 58 Market on your right. You can get all the usual Oregon convenience fare — wine, beer, fishing bait and microwave food, but you can also get the Lee family's fantastic spicy homemade kimchi in small or large jars. Homemade teriyaki chicken over rice or yakisoba noodles is also on the menu — made to order. Fermented food lovers: The kimchi is worth a stop.

BEST TIME TO SHOP GOODWILL, ST. VINNY'S AND SALVATION ARMY

Donors unload mountains of good stuff at the end of the year to take advantage of tax write-offs. December through February are prime shopping months.

BEST PLACE TO GO TO FEEL BETTER ABOUT THE ECONOMY

BEST PLACE TO PREPARE MENTALLY FOR AN EARTHQUAKE

Any of the Eugene businesses along the railroad tracks.

BEST PLACE TO BE WHEN THE DAMS FAIL IN THE BIG ONE

Fifth floor or above at Riverbend.

MOST IMPROVED SCENIC DRIVE

Hallelujah! The asphalt gods have heard our pleas because Lorane Highway (between Washington Street and Paige Avenue) went from being the worst pretty drive in town to one of the best. A year ago, driving your car or riding your bike down its sinuous path was almost certain death, for shocks and tires anyway. Now, instead of white-knuckling it, drivers can enjoy the leafy scenery speckled with chicken coops, gardens and beautiful homes. Don't get too cocky though, be mindful of cyclists and wandering souls.

BEST WAY TO REBUILD PUBLIC CONFIDENCE IN CITY GOVERNMENT

BEST LOCAL BAND

1. Sol Seed solseedmusic.com.
2. Blue Lotus bluelotuseugene.com.
3. Medium Troy mediumtroy.com.

Well, this is no surprise. Eugene fans courted last year's winners Sol Seed throughout this year's Next Big Thing competition, and the six-piece reggae fusion band nabbed the title again. With roots in southern Oregon, a large Eugene following and fans up and down the West Coast, the guys of Sol Seed are primed to record their second full-length and first professionally produced album, Family Tree. The world could use more music like this: uplifting but not cloying, thoughtful but not preachy and hella good music to shake your booty to. For more information about Family Tree, check out Sol Seed's Kickstarter page at wkly.ws/1lm.

BEST VOCALIST

1. Halie Loren halieloren.com.
2. Sara Dawson Zagarino & Siri Vik (tie)

Eugene native Halie Loren is a rising star in the international jazz scene and just made the top of the Billboard jazz charts in Japan with her new album Simply Love. See our review at wkly.ws/1lv. Loren is charismatic on stage, whether it's with pianist Matt Treder and bassist Mark Schneider, with her larger band or rocking out with The Sugar Beets. Loren has sold out the Wildish Theater a couple of times. We imagine she could easily pack some larger halls, but she prefers more intimate venues, such as The Jazz Station downtown.

Siri Vik is a Eugene native who returned to teach at LCC after a long absence of study and performance on the East Coast and Europe. She has sung with the Eugene Opera, Oregon Bach Festival and Actors Cabaret of Eugene.

BEST CLOTHING DESIGNER

1. Laura Lee Laroux revivallclothing.com.
2. Alli Ditson allihalla.com.
3. Mitra Chester

If you've been paying attention, Laura Lee Laroux is becoming a household name in local and regional fashion (she nabbed first place last year too). With her line, Revivall Clothing, Laroux created her own niche: upcycled prairie couture and ready-to-wear (found at Redoux Parlor and the Oregon Country Fair). Not only is her line wearable and so Eug, it's meticulously made. From flirty jumpers to schoolboy chapeaus, expect to see much, much more from the designer in the coming year.

Not much has changed since last year — or the year before

3. Studio One Café 1473 E. 19th Ave. 342-8596.

It's hard to talk about Brails without immediately conjuring up images of syrup-drenched pancakes, scrambled eggs and perfectly toasted, crunchy-yet-chewy hash browns. Joy Knudtson, owner of Brails, is no stranger to the best hangover breakfast award, and when asked why she thinks Brails has scored for a 10th year, she says it's because she makes an effort to connect with her community. "We have really quality food, but I have a very good relationship with a lot of people who come through our restaurant, and it makes me so happy," she says. And Knudtson recently reached out to the community through volunteer work, helping to make 300 pancakes and 100 orders of biscuits and gravy for the Eugene Mission. "The guy from the Mission came in today and said he really appreciated it," Knudtson says. "That kind of thing makes me so happy, so from now on I'll do it every year."

And while the Goat is well known for its coffee selection, from spicy Sumatra to vanilla-tinged Mexican Chiapas, it also hosts live music shows and displays local art on its walls, making it a rich hotbed of Eugene culture.

Eugene Coffee Company recently reopened after being closed over the summer. Two months in, coffee-lovers have already set up home in its new campus-area location. Sue Harnly, who came in third last year, has owned the store for more than five years and has worked hard to build a sense of community in the shop. Harnly says she loves her connection to the customers, when working as a barista, and credits her whole team as integral to the continued success of the store. "She is an incredible woman. She really focuses on building the community atmosphere," says Taylor Bolle, an employee of Eugene Coffee for two years.

Known for making simple flavors like chocolate, caramel and vanilla irresistible with its rich, bold style, Red Wagon is slinging its ice cream downtown and from the cart. Owners Stuart and Emily Phillips are using the downtown space to treat customers to late-night treats with "Red Wagon After Dark" 10 pm to 2 am on Fridays and Saturdays. Think of it as an ice cream speakeasy — along with the cold stuff, Red Wagon has cocktails and homemade syrups (whiskey, anyone?) and it's all delicious.

JC Lee and his mother, Sue, have run Noodle Bowl for three years, and the family vibes flow through this tasty, clean, speedy, affordable and spacious downtown restaurant. While Sue is the brains behind the operation, JC says he is the one with the good sense of taste that makes Noodle Bowl's flavors authentic. The bi bimbop is everyone's favorite — a rice dish with veggies and meat in a hot stone pot — but the side dish of kimchi that comes with many of the entrees is the true gem. And if you have room, order some bubble tea for dessert.

But god, make sure you start with the sweet, tasty salsa, freshly fried tortilla chips and a pitcher of sangria. And if it's up to waitress Bridget Young, you have to try a camarones taco and a carnitas taco that is "dripping with fat and delicious." You'll love the small portions so you can try a little bit of everything.

3. Viva! Vegetarian Grill 12th & Willamette St. eugenecooks.com. After two years of specializing in Southern-fried comfort food on the go, owners Stephen and Colleen Sheehan are still serving it up downtown while planning on scaling it up at the much-anticipated Elk Horn Brewery at Franklin and Hilyard. Stephen Sheehan says the brewery will have a full restaurant with a sort of "wild Oregon" theme, but the cart will stay open for at least a year after the restaurant opens, and longer if they can find the right staff to keep it running right. Meanwhile, catch them weekends during Christmas tree season at Carroll's Country Christmas Trees in Veneta, and keep track of their locations and specials on Facebook.

The staff keeps up the friendly diner atmosphere, and there are even board games in case of a wait. We suggest pointing newcomers toward favorites the Eugenewich, the Hot Things and the Southern-fried tofu. The café now offers breakfast, too, and has beer and kombucha on tap.

We've all experienced the mixture of sympathy and annoyance for poor, helpless parents in restaurants trying unsuccessfully to curb the tantrum of a screaming child. But it seems that places like Laughing Planet, where dinosaurs abound and bright, whimsical artwork decorates the walls, provide just the sort of aura that kids dig. Dinosaurs, quesadillas and family time equal happiness for all involved.

Beer-braised beef gingerbread with mustard butter, potatoes and long-cooked cabbage; deep-fried bok choy kimchi; sweet potato pie with fresh ginger, whipped cream and honey caramel. With these menu items, it's not hard to see why Party Downtown, born from the Party Cart that could, nabbed first place for best new restaurant. Sophisticated and innovative flavor pairings inspired by seasonal local produce and livestock, all beneath the guise of comfort food, is the signature of owners Tiffany Norton and Mark Kosmicki. "We don't cut corners," Norton says. "We make food that we want to eat." It's clear they're not the only ones. Oh, and if you see "tiny biscuits with bacon honey butter" on their rotating chalkboard menu, order them pronto.

3. Deluxe 1331 Willamette St. 686-0205. wkly.ws/1lo.

After the success of "Thrift Shop" by Macklemore this last year, many thrift stores have been flooded with new customers. In Eugene, St. Vincent de Paul vends the usual velour jump suits and house slippers, but the organization is even more widely known for its charitable programs, such as managing Eugene's car-camping program and providing affordable housing. "Have some fun. Save some money," is their motto, and it's hard not to with such a wide selection of secondhand goods. Each store has a huge selection of nearly everything, and that's without mentioning the books, which tower over any other section of the store and bring customers back again and again.

BEST PET SUPPLY STORE

1. Mini Pet Mart 974 W. 6th Ave. 344-9603; 2636 Willamette St. 345-3399; 2775 River Rd. 688-8619; 1999 Main St., Spfd. 744-0665.

3. Oakway Fitness 170 Oakway Rd. 343-3314. oakwayfit.com.

When it comes to versatility in the realm of exercise, the YMCA has you covered, and then some. Upon joining through an affordable membership, meet with a wellness coach and, in turn, benefit from a personal program designed for your needs and goals. Additionally, enjoy all the long-standing gym has to offer in the way of sports, classes and exercise regimens. Play pickup basketball, swim, take up racquetball, relax through water yoga and find out why Zumba is all the rage. The possibilities are endless, and so are the opportunities for camaraderie, improved health and higher and higher goals.

BEST CLOTHING SHOP

2. Clothes Horse 201 E. 13th Ave. 345-5099. wkly.ws/1ln.
3. Deluxe 1331 Willamette St. 686-0205. wkly.ws/1lo.

Armed with sewing machines, an eclectic studio space and racks of fascinating garments, the talented designers at Redoux Parlour help guide discarded clothing into its next life. These shirts, jackets and pants, deemed useless by their former owners, are reincarnated into fabulous dresses, vests and even swimsuits. Owner Laura Lee Laroux (see best clothing designer) runs the Parlour with the focus of "upcycling" or redoing (hence the fancy name) clothing designs that are already abundant. This closet afterlife also offers resale clothing, sewing classes, alterations, custom designs and clothing trades once a week. The store prides itself on its quality leather products, such as unique belts and holsters, custom wedding dresses and Laroux's eco-friendly Revivall Clothing line. Redoux designer Renne Phillips sums it up by saying, "It's really a hub for pretty much anything fashion and sewing in town." Eugene agrees.

2. Viking Braggot 520 Commercial St. 653-8371. drinkviking.com.
3. Party Downtown 55 W. Broadway. 345-8228. partyeugene.com.

Maybe it's the glossy red sign on Broadway, the super plush theater seating or the thoughtfully curated films — whatever it is, the Bijou Metro has done wonders to class up downtown Eugene. And don't pigeon hole them as "highbrow" — although they can be (art house, foreign, indie and documentary films dominate the cinema's lineup) — because Bijou Metro is not afraid to get downright campy (1979's The Visitor) and nostalgic (Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles: The Movie and The Secret of the Ooze).

3. CatCare, Limited 1400 Willamette St. 302-5824. catcarelimited.com.

When it comes to health, pet owners want to make sure their furry family members are in good hands, and Eugeneans chose Bush Animal Hospital as their go-to for animal care. "We are a very client-focused practice and try to focus on providing the best medicine we can," says Diane Fowler, practice manager for the hospital. "We feel we can offer clients quite a high level of care, and we just have a really compassionate staff." And when it comes to reaching out, Bush Animal Hospital is ahead of the game — check out its Facebook page, and you'll find tons of helpful pet-related info, like updates on the recent chicken jerky poisonings and tips on keeping your pet safe over the holidays. Plus, they post a ton of adorable dog and cat photos, so what's not to love?

Lucky are those who wander by The Kiva on a Customer Appreciation Day, for they shall bliss out on free samples of local food, from roasted organic veggies to amazing Cousin Jack's Pasties. The Kiva's been a staple of Eugene since 1970, and after more than 40 years in business, we think they've mastered the perfect combination of friendly atmosphere, sustainable foods and a certain hard-to-define aura that makes us proud to live in Eugene.

BEST GLASS/SMOKE SHOP

3. Hunky Dory Pipe & Tobacco 271 W. 7th Ave. 345-1853.

wkly.ws/1lt.

A glass shop used to be called a “head shop” because it was a place for people to go and get their mind right. The cozy vibe at Midtown lets you think. And you’ll have to if you want to find a new artifact among a thousand chillums, bowls, bubblers, bongs, hookahs and things you’ve never heard of. The vendors are top notch, and the pieces always creative and affordable. Specialty tobaccos abound and they don’t sell spice. Owner Richard Johnson considers his wares “spiritual objects” and doesn’t want people faking the funk through them. It all goes back to that headiness — consider the mystifying goth-meets-ecosexual Steven Lopez mural on the west wall.

3. J. Michaels 160 E. Broadway. 342-2002.

Smith Family Bookstore is a book lover’s wet dream. Powell’s in Portland may be bigger, but the Smith Family locations here in town are just the right combo of musty old books, glossy new books and just plain old books piled around the store in such a way that you feel comfortable pulling tomes off the shelves to browse and sprawling for a while in the aisles. Tsunami comes in second place again, and to be honest, that bookstore almost needs a category of its own — best bookstore, music venue and home for political activism? Finally, if you are looking for something a little older than simply used, check out third-place finisher J. Michaels, which has not just new and used books but rare and antiquarian as well.

BEST PLACE TO GET YOUR HAIR CUT

2. Analog Barber Shop 862 Olive St. 510-5668. analogbarbershop.com.

3. Moss Hair Studio 233 W. 7th Ave. 636-0055. mossairystudio.com.

Having opened its doors just this February, Lussuria Salon is new to Eugene. But its co-owner, Elisha Johnson, has 13 years of salon experience and a fleet of practiced professionals. The staff is friendly, the décor is chic and their first priority is customer service, Johnson says. They offer on-site childcare so you don’t need to panic about scheduling, and for a high-end salon, the pricing is affordable. Lussuria also offers facials, waxing, massage and hydrotherapy, as well as the opportunity to rent out the whole space or bring a group of friends for a party. The coolest part is that Johnson is working to get benefits for her stylists, something practically unheard of in the salon industry. So grab your pals (or even your young’ns!) and trim up those flyaways.

3. Camas Swale Farm 25844 Butler Rd., Junction City. 554-1856. camasswalefarm.com.

Longtime Winter Green Farm employee Linda Davies says this year was another great one for the farm’s Community Supported Agriculture boxes because of amazing tomatoes, spectacular squash and sweet and delicious carrots. “The years vary with the weather,” she explains, and next fall could have a completely different highlight. Winter Green’s CSA boxes have more than 40 different types of produce, so if you’re feeling like cooking up a locally grown storm, be sure to sign up for its regular season and fall boxes.

BEST ALTERNATIVE SPORTS TEAM

1. Emerald City Roller Girls emeraldcityrollergirls.net.
2. Eugene Reign eugenewomensrugby.blogspot.com.
3. Lane United Fútbol Club laneunitedfc.org.

The Emerald City Roller Girls, a league of skaters within the Women's Flat Track Roller Derby Association, play the physical sport very well, and starting in January 2014 there will be more chances to see them in action. Half of their bouts at the Lane Events Center last season were private, but this coming season all of them will be available to the public. Described as "a hockey game, but replace the ice with a roller rink," with uniforms often made by the skaters themselves, roller derby has its own niche in Eugene, and the Emerald City Roller Girls are a big reason why.

BEST SPORTS EVENT

1. UO football season goducks.com.
2. Roller derby bouts emeraldcityrollergirls.net.
3. Eugene Emeralds baseball games wkly.ws/1lq.

A great deal of excitement surrounds UO football season these days. There are the countless uniform combinations, yes, and the presence of Nike with Uncle Phil Knight hovering overhead, but the entertaining, prolific and fast-paced team on the field is what makes it a spectacle. Routinely and passionately cheered on by 50,000-plus filling Autzen Stadium and donning everything from green and yellow to black and grey, the team has solidified its position among the elite in college football. Oregon is currently ranked number three in the country, with sights on a national championship, and star quarterback Marcus Mariota is on the cover of the Nov. 4 issue of Sports Illustrated. It's no wonder this is a great time to be a Duck.

BEST LOCAL NEWSCASTER

1. Matt Templeman KEZI.
2. Renee McCullough KEZI.
3. Al Peterson KVAL.

They are too nice to say it, so we're going to say it for them: The fact that KEZI's Matt Templeman and Renee McCullough came in first and second place for best local newscaster is a vindication of how much this area values local ownership and independent news sources, and it shows how silly it was for KMTR's new owners to fire its tried and true news team when it took over the news station in June.

Templeman says he thinks he got a "Best of" nomination because "this is simply the result of getting involved in a community that I care about. I love reporting on issues important to all of us and presenting the news with Renee." McCullough chimes in, "I have simply been overwhelmed by the amount of support from our community the last few months, and could not be happier doing a job I love, in a community filled with so many wonderful people." She says, "I can't imagine raising my kids anywhere else and am so thankful to be able to bring you the news each night with my friend and co-anchor of 14 years."

Templeman adds, "One of the best parts of this job is being actively engaged with so many non profits and causes. I have my personal family with my wife Kimra and three boys," but he says he has multiple other families "including all my friends at Pearl Buck Center, MDA, Alzheimer's and various schools. It's an honor to be able to do what I do every day."

BEST THING THAT COULD HAPPEN TO EUGENE

1. Downtown revitalization continues
2. A new mayor
3. More jobs

Our readers poll indicates that Eugeneans like what's happening downtown and want to see more of the life that's springing up in the vicinity of Broadway and Willamette. We think it's funny that Mayor Kitty Piercy wins the Best Politico title while also getting sent packing in this category — something about her brings out the lovers and the haters. And we've got to agree about number three. Let's hope this slow recovery sticks.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

Seeing the stars is a bit of a gamble as the winter clouds roll in, but Oregonians would never let a little thing like that stop them. On Nov. 8, the Eugene Astronomical Society will throw its monthly Star Party, where everyone is invited to sidle up to a telescope and peer at the cosmos. "This time of year in the autumn sky you have a lot of star clusters and some nebulae that are pretty neat," says Jerry Oltion, secretary for the Eugene Astronomical Society. "There'll be a couple of galaxies and double stars. And, of course, the moon; the moon is the most beautiful thing up there!" Oltion advises dressing warmly, and there's no need to bring a flashlight — if the skies are clear, the moon should provide plenty of light. And if cloudiness prevails? Well, Oltion says, there's always next month.

The Eugene Astronomical Society Star Party starts at 6pm Friday, Nov. 8, College Hill Reservoir, 24th & Lawrence, weather permitting. FREE.

The history of the vibrator goes back farther than you might expect — in 1880, Dr. Joseph Granville patented the first electromechanical vibrator, although earlier versions existed. Starting in the late 1800s, doctors used vibrators to massage the “pelvic area” of women suffering from “hysteria.” Or, you know, to give them mind-blowing orgasms. Sarah Ruhl’s play, In The Next Room, explores the comedic impact of this unconventional treatment on a stately Victorian doctor and his wife. Who knew the 19th century could be so progressive?

In The Next Room shows 7:30pm Wednesday, Nov. 13 through Saturday, Nov. 23, The Blue Door Theater, LCC Campus. $8, $5 stu. & sr. — Amy Schneider

COFFEE PLANT ROASTER

A powerhouse of an enviro documentary, A Fierce Green Fire explores the history of the environmental movement through the 20th century and into the 21st, from David Brower and the Sierra Club's first efforts in the 1950s to Bill McKibben, founder of 350.org, and his uphill battle to bring attention to climate change. After the screening, make sure to stick around for an audience discussion with filmmaker Mark Kitchell and Cascadia Wildlands wildlife advocate Spencer Lennard. And since this screening is part of the Encircle Film Series, which aims to "raise awareness by exposing the truth through media," keep your eyes peeled for more enlightening documentaries rolling into the Bijou.

African dancing, music and films will abound at Celebrate Africa! Festival of the Arts this weekend. The festival kicks off with a series of African films at the Bijou Metro, starting at 2:30pm on Friday, with an opening reception at 8pm at the Broadway Commerce Center, followed by a day full of dance and drum classes at Gerlinger Annex on Saturday. Heading over to Cozmic, don't miss the Eugene premier of the Dusu Mali Band, a "Pan African fusion of jazz, Afro beat, blues and funk." Films continue through Sunday, so there are plenty of ways to take advantage of this splash of African culture and art in the PNW.

Sniffing out what you shouldn't miss in the arts this week

Grab your flashlights because arts writer and photographer Bob Keefer is leading a flashlight-guided Second Friday Art Walk in Springfield from 5:30 to 7:30 pm Friday, Nov. 8, beginning at the City Hall Gallery, 225 5th St. On the crawl, be sure to pop into Springfield Museum for a show by the Oregon Fiber Artists; photographs of ancient ruins inspire many of the fiber art pieces.

Strap on your goggles, tighten your bustle and fasten your jet pack because the New Zone Gallery is transforming into a Wild West-meets-Victorian wonderland for the "Life in the Age of Steampunk" exhibit running Nov. 9-16, featuring local artists Judd Turner, Steve La Riccia and Joe Mross. The fantasy will culminate with a gala extravaganza 7 pm Nov. 16 with music by Mood Area 52 and the Whiskey Chasers; period-inspired attire is highly encouraged.

There's no better time to twirl around in the Swiss Alps than now. The Majestic Theatre in Corvallis is putting on a production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's The Sound of Music Nov. 7-23.

You better work! The UO LGBTQA brings female impersonator Latrice Royale — a former contestant from RuPaul's Drag Race — and the Portland-based queer cabaret Caravan of Glam to the UO campus 7:30 pm Friday, Nov. 8, at the Global Scholars Hall. Tickets are available at the EMU ticket office or brownpapertickets.com.

MARRIAGE MALAISE

Concussion is an intimate study of sexual politics and ennui

CONCUSSION: Written and directed by Stacie Passon. Cinematography, David Kruta. Editing, Anthony Cupo. Starring Robin Weigert, Maggie Siff, Julie Fain Lawrence, Johnathan Tchaikovsky, Emily Kinney. Radius (Weinstein Co.), 2013. R. 96 minutes. ★ ★ ★ ☆

The blow to the head that occurs during the opening scenes of Concussion has so little to do with what this smart, subtle movie is really about that the title almost seems like, at best, a MacGuffin — something dramatic inserted by writer/director Stacie Passon just to get her where she wants to go with her story. It just so happens, however, that Passon herself, just before writing the screenplay, suffered a mild concussion. Art is funny that way: From pain is born investigation and inspiration, and in this case, a knock on the noggin has resulted in a very fine film about sexual politics and personal freedom, or lack thereof.

Long story short: Abby (the wonderful Robin Weigert, of Deadwood fame) and Kate (Julie Fain Lawrence) are a middle-aged couple living a seemingly comfortable suburban life with their two young kids. Their existence is smooth and pleasant, if a bit mild and routine. All this changes when Abby is hit in the temple by a baseball thrown by her son. She quickly grows restless, and begins to seek the sexual connection that has been severed altogether with her wife. Abby sees an escort, and then becomes one.

The fact that Concussion revolves around the marriage of two lesbians is relevant only in the sense that this social fact is taken completely for granted. No undue attention is drawn to the social context of Abby and Kate's union, nor does Passon have any political axes to grind. This portrayal of acceptance is more than refreshing: for many of us, it is fact. And it allows the director to focus on the nitty gritty of a relationship in crisis. This movie is not about identity politics. It's about sexual politics and the tension of intimate relationships that have settled into routine — out of comfort, fear, need — despite an intrinsic lack of passion.

Weigert gives an amazing performance; her face alone is capable of registering a storm of tangled emotions at once, and as she dives deeper and deeper into her double life, we witness the gorgeous and terrible conflicts that take place among sexual desire, personal freedom, honest commitment and loving loyalty. And it is a credit to Passon's skill as both a writer and a director that Concussion rarely takes the easy road. Abby's infidelities are neither morally condemned nor entirely celebrated; rather, the movie's frank, often touching depiction of sexuality is troublingly erotic and sentimentally complicated. It raises more questions than it answers. Those questions — What is the difference between need and want? Is it worth staying in an otherwise good relationship if the intimacy is absent, and if so, do I step out? — and how they are posed rank this as one of the more sophisticated and adult romantic dramas to come out in recent years. ■

MUSIC NEWS &
NOTES FROM
WILLAMETTE VALLEY

There's a dynamic duo not to be missed at WOW Hall Thursday, Nov. 14: Lynx with opener Tender Forever. Lynx is a crackling mix of singer-songwriter, producer, beat boxer and multi-instrumentalist hailing from the Bay Area. Lynx's latest album, Light Up Your Lantern (released Oct. 22), highlights her cool electric aesthetic, mixing acoustic and synth beats over gritty vocals. The WOW Hall darling — she was named Favorite Female Performer of 2011 — has collaborated with Beats Antique, Bassnectar and Matisyahu. Portland-based Melanie Valera, the voice and brains behind Tender Forever, comes to your ears via an itty-bitty town in southwest France. Her playful but raw variety of pop is reminiscent of The Blow and Mirah (friends and collaborators of Valera). Together, these two will dance you along the electro-pop spectrum.

Grrrlz Rock is in full swing this week. Check out 15-year-old Washington prodigy Emily Randolph, who recently appeared on The Voice — she just may be the PNW's country-tinged answer to Adele. Randolph plays Nov. 8 at the Granary, Nov. 9 at Sam Bond's and Nov. 10 at Plank Town Brewing. Portland's sister act, Acoustic Minds, close out a night packed with local talent with their soul-pop blend Nov. 9 at Sam Bond's. More info at grrrlzrock.com.

Eugene is in a competitive mood these days: Wandering Goat hosts a 24-hour Composition Competition 7 pm Nov. 9. Participants will have 12 hours to compose a piece and 12 hours to practice. Prizes TBA.

The Eugene Musicians Collective — "a recently-formed group of local musicians dedicated to building an engaged, mutually-supportive, cooperative live music scene in Lane County" — hosts its kick-off party and benefit for the Oregon Supported Living Program 4 to 8 pm Saturday, Nov. 9, at Mac's Restaurant and Night Club.

Don't miss: Proto-punk funnyman Jonathan Richman at Sam Bond's 9 pm Nov. 7; fast Montana blue grassers The Lil' Smokies at Axe & Fiddle, Cottage Grove, 8:30 pm Nov. 9.

PLAY SAM BOND'S NOV. 15

BIG (SUR) SOUNDS

Bill Frisell, the Middle Eastern Dance Guild and more

From downtown New York avant jazz in the '80s through more straight-ahead jazz after moving to Seattle to his abstract string quartet (originally part of a multimedia project) to his more recent country-, folk-, and rock-tinged work, protean guitar master Bill Frisell manages to explore new territory while maintaining an instantly recognizable artistic voice throughout his many musical meanderings. Fortunately, The Shedd has made it easy to trace Frisell's always intriguing musical journeys by bringing him here often, and Friday Nov. 8, it follows him to Big Sur, where, thanks to a Monterey Jazz Festival commission, he spent 10 days writing a 19-song reflective masterpiece inspired by the legendary California coastal paradise. Featuring members of both his string 858 Quartet and his Beautiful Dreamers jazz trio, Big Sur represents a pinnacle of Frisell's two-decade long melding of chamber jazz, rock and American folk music.

Another unique voice rings out Friday Nov. 15 when cellist/chanteuse Ashia Grzesik brings her Bison Rouge band to Sam Bond's to celebrate the release of their colorful new album, Diesel vs Lungs. Familiar to indie classical music fans from her appearances with Vagabond Opera and Portland Cello Project, the Wroclaw-born, America-raised Grzesik uses her solo albums to channel her Polish and Slavic heritage, in original as well as multilingual traditional music. In fact, the former Cirque du Soleil performer recently returned from an extended European sojourn that culminated in a fascinating multimedia show in Berlin, and her soaring sound and riveting stage presence owe as much to the European cabaret tradition as to American pop.

Another multicultural performer with Eastern European roots comes to Tsunami Books Sunday Nov. 10, when Czech-born instrument maker Edward Powell performs Turkish and Indian music with Eugene's own Josh Humphrey on tabla, ney flutist Mia Baki and percussionist Christopher Pfeffer. Powell, an accomplished sitar master, now himself plays an instrument he devised called the "ragmakanter," sort of a hybrid between the Indian sarod and Middle Eastern oud lute.

Still more Middle Eastern sounds will be bubbling, and bellies undulating, at Cozmic Nov. 15 when dancers from Eugene's Middle Eastern Dance Guild join musicians from Seattle's House of Tarab septet in mid-20th-century Arabic dance music on acoustic instruments from the region.

Speaking of dance, one of the most notorious is the "Dance of the Seven Veils" from Richard Strauss's opera Salome (now onstage at Portland Opera, incidentally). Thursday Nov. 14 at the Hult Center, the Eugene Symphony plays that music, Berlioz's game-changing Symphonie Fantastique and a pair of violin showcases, Ravel's Tzigane and Saint-Saëns' Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso, featuring violinist Danielle Belen.

Dance rhythms also percolate through one of the 20th century's most electrifying ballet scores, Spanish composer Manuel de Falla's fiery Love, the Magician, which tops the bill at this Saturday's Oregon Mozart Players concert at the UO's Beall Concert Hall, along with Mahler's orchestration of Schubert's famous song "Death and the Maiden" and a Rossini overture. You'll recognize some of Falla's famous tunes, but this is a rare opportunity to hear most of this glorious early 20th-century music, with alto Karen Esquivel contributing vocals.

Another chamber orchestra, England's venerable Academy of St. Martin in the Fields, takes the Beall stage the following afternoon to perform Brahms's Sextet in B major and rarely heard octets by Joachim Raff and George Enescu. Also at Beall: OMP's former principal clarinetist, Todd DelGiudice, returns from his new Florida home to lead UO big band jazz Nov. 15; Oregon Bach Festival artistic director Matthew Halls pops over from England to conduct UO singers and orchestra in Mozart's Great Mass in C minor and Benjamin Britten's beautiful Hymn to St. Cecilia, in honor of the English composer's centenary and British composer Herbert Howells's tribute to President Kennedy, Take Him, Earth, for Cherishing on Nov. 17. On Nov. 18, the Eugene Symphonic Band plays music by American composer Frank Ticheli, Mexican composer Arturo Márquez and other uncommonly heard orchestral works. ■

HER ABLE HEART

It's been three years since local singer-songwriter Anna Gilbert was dubbed Eugene Weekly's Next Big Thing, and she has been busy. Since then, she has released an acoustic-themed holiday release (2011's Christmas), spent time writing country songs for other artists and now she is back with a new album, The Able Heart, which was released Nov. 5. According to Gilbert, it was time for a shift in her songwriting priorities.

"I decided to take a break from all that because I wanted to write something for myself," Gilbert says. "I wanted to do an album and I wanted it to be something I could sing myself and believe in."

Heart, arguably Gilbert's strongest and most complete work to date, is a meditation on what keeps us going during difficult times. A deeply introspective record, Heart examines some of the struggles that Gilbert, her family and her friends have endured the past couple years. If you have an affinity for songs that do not necessarily resolve, and end with just as many questions as when the song began, this record might be for you.

"The last couple years have been really crazy for a lot of people, not just myself," says Gilbert. "I've seen a lot of my friends go through cancer, divorce, people cheating on each other, losing their homes, betrayal. But the glory of all of it was I wrote songs from these experiences, and while they don't all get tied up in a pretty bow at the end, sometimes art comes from something sad that's happened so it's kind of redemptive."

Gilbert doesn't pull any punches, especially when examining her own life through the most objective lens she can find. The swelling orchestral pop track "Be Still My Heart" finds Gilbert chastising herself for — among other things — letting jealousy and doubt cripple her emotionally and spiritually, while on the minimalist piano-and-percussion-led opener "O, Freedom," she laments the loss of a time in her life when she was unfettered by expectations, filters and the weightiness of life. The ambient piano rocker "White Noise" even finds her struggling to hear the proverbial still small voice of God in the midst of life's sorrows and cares. For Gilbert it all came down to being honest and finding a way to grow in each situation.

"It was important for me to get comfortable with knowing that I don't have an answer yet and I don't know if I ever will," Gilbert says. "But here are some things I do know: I can learn to be strong, I can learn to have hope, I can find something to learn from this."

BAY BRIDGE BOOGIE WOOGIE

If you didn't know Quinn Deveaux was from San Francisco (which he is), you might guess the retro-flavored songwriter hailed from The Big Easy. Track one off Late Night Drive — the first of two records the popular Bay Area musician is releasing this November — is "Bff," a New Orleans-style piano tune recalling the legendary musician Allen Toussaint's slow-rollin' and gin-soaked simplicity.

But despite the French last name and a penchant for the sounds of boogie-woogie and juke joints, Deveaux has no connection to Louisiana. "My great-great grandfather was French and settled in the Bahamian Islands," Deveaux says, explaining his links to the region are via the music it bred. "My favorite decade of music is the '50s when soul and blues and gospel and rock 'n' roll were all blended together and exploding." He continues, "I wouldn't say our sound is throwback. I am certainly writing songs today."

Songs like "Changes," also from Late Night Drive: a breezy and light contemporary pop-blues tune that would fit well with the likes of Keb' Mo'. "But when I try and conjure the most useful changes or ideas," Deveaux adds, "I pull from what I love which is stuff from the '50s." The '50s inspiration is particularly apparent with Originals — the second of Deveaux's 2013 releases, this time with his band The Blue Beat Review. Originals track "Lil 45" is reminiscent of Bo Diddley, and overall a pulsing Chicago blues backbeat informs the record.

If Late Night Drive is the nightcap, Originals is for earlier when the buzz is still fresh and everyone has their boogie wingtip shoes on.

Quinn Deveaux and The Blue Beat Review play 8:30 pm Friday, Nov. 8, at Axe & Fiddle in Cottage Grove; $10. — William Kennedy

THE COMMUNITY CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS PROUDLY WELCOMES:

SEE JANE MAKE YOU LAUGH

Northwest Women's Comedy Fest hits the Wildish with new talent

There's nothing more attractive than a funny woman (or rather, a funny person). Forget what the world of advertising tries to tell us; true beauty doesn't rest with spherical breasts south of a perfectly placed Monroe mole (or washboard abs south of a cleft chin). It lies with a person who can master perfect timing or who can observe the subtle hilarity in everyday life and discuss it on stage with only a microphone. The comedy scene, in general, is a sausage festival, but that doesn't stop a compelling group of talented comedians — who happen to be female — from coming together once a year in Springfield to perform under the same roof.

2013 marks the eighth year for the festival, and show curator/creator/comedian Leigh Anne Jasheway sees the dire importance of a comedic event, beyond the gender stigmas. "As we get into winter, you need comedy," she says. "I take an active approach to put more humor in your life."

Jasheway remembers eight years ago when she spoke with EW about the festival's debut and how EW's style guide restricted the usage of "first annual." (This remains true based on the logic that if it's the "first" something, it can't quite be annual yet.) Today, as the 8th Annual Northwest Women's Comedy Festival approaches, Jasheway has a message for the EW employee who told her about the "annual" rule. "In your face, Bill!" she says, laughing.

This year's show will feature past favorites including Barbara Holm, Veronica Heath and Jen Seaman as well as a few newbies added to the mix. Notably, five young comics come from the University of Oregon; this festival will be the first of its kind for all of them. Maddie Dunkelberg, Zoe Muellner, Rhiannah

Johnson and Suzanna Akins are from the UO student group Absolute Improv, and student Gina Ginsberg has only started doing stand-up comedy in the past year. "We're interested in doing stand-up but we're afraid," Dunkelberg says.

The prevailing comedy's boys' club attitude is hard to ignore, but that doesn't stop these young comedians from making you laugh.

"As a new comic, I feel that the comedy scene is hard to break into, especially as a woman," Ginsberg says. "Women have it harder in every profession, comedy as well. Ninety percent of the time I'm introduced on stage, the MC says, 'Here's a very funny female comic.' Women are not taken seriously."

"I find it interesting that people think a man dressing up as a woman is funny but not women dressing up as men," Muellner says. "That needs to change." Comedy may have an intact glass ceiling, but it hasn't stopped these comics from making funny faces through the glass, doing what they do best, which is making people laugh.

"Women are on the come-up," Ginsberg says. "Years of being treated horribly, we have a lot of funny things to say about it." She pauses, realizing there's a joke to be said. "Women are the new Jews of comedy — years of struggle." ■

The 8th Annual Northwest Women's Comedy Festival kicks off at 7 pm Saturday, Nov. 9, at Wildish Theater, Springfield; $30 (includes small glass of wine and a Larry's Cupcakes cupcake).

WINE BY LANCE SPARKS

SHARE THE FEAST

Food and wine taste better with company

Give thanks. Go ahead and feast, share a grand meal with friends and family. Sure, it's not easy to feel celebratory in these times. Tea Party Republicans did all they could to undermine our confidence, to extol Ayn Rand's absurd "virtue of selfishness" and to profane the very concept of communion. But this season and the impulses behind it are ancient: We celebrate the harvest. We come together as a community of families to share our bounty, even if we face a bleak winter.

And with apologies to vegan friends, this feast is all about the bird. Most of the year, turkeys are quite safe from me, but maybe twice a year, in an irresistible rush of flavor nostalgia, I gotta have me some bird — plus some stuffing, gravy, green beans, mashed spuds, finishing with pies: apple, mince, pumpkin. I wanna eat way too much, then nap in front of the tube while kids romp and strut.

Now, that's a Thanksgiving feast, a table laden with food clichés, but I gush drool just keying the words, triggering electric memories (and lingering grief, missing the late Ethel Watson who recreated just such a feast yearly for decades).

Now the wines: controversies ensue. Matching roast turkey with wine can foster fist-fights. You might as well talk religion or politics. But after years of tasting/testing, we've found compromise: Bust the budget with variety.

We happen to like the turkey-and-gewurztraminer match. (Don't fret pronunciation; just say "G'vertz, gimmersum.") And we like it with just a whisper of residual sugar to round off the acid edges. We like Montinore Estate 2012 Gewurztraminer ($15) for its fresh citrusy fruit and creamy mouthfeel. You want bone dry? Try Server's version ($17). Brandborg 2011 Umpqua Valley ($18) is a stunner for the lychee/pink grapefruit flavors, long finish.

Gotcher chardonnay: Bethel Heights 2011 Unoaked Chardonnay ($18) delivers pure fruit — think melons, apples, citrus — without being soaked in oak. Loverly for butter-basted bird.

Now, if the wine ain't red, Uncle Fred would rather be dead. So: Server 2009 Pinot Noir Select ($30) is mighty tasty, rich in red fruit flavors, round and gentle enough to balance with bird-and-trimmings.

Bigger? Not slightly local, but whatabargain! Mont-Redon Reserve Côtes du Rhône ($14) is bold but graceful, rich in flavors of red and black fruit, round and ripe, nearly a steal.

Bigger yet? It's no secret that we like the winemaking of Matt LaVelle (LaVelle Vineyards, Elmira). He does really special work with the so-called "big reds" (cabernet, merlot, syrah); they purchase grapes from the Columbia Valley, then Matt makes his magic. LaVelle 2010 Cabernet Sauvignon is yummy, deep and dark, with black currant flavors wrapped in warm Hungarian oak, acutely balanced, just delicious. It's pricey ($32) but still good value for the experience — and shutting up Fred is nearly priceless.

Maybe the Tea Partiers are right, but not to my mind and heart. All these foods, all these wines taste better shared. I'm reminded, too, of Jim and Percy of Spirit Farm (play Perugino's periodically); they indulge me sometimes by covering Bob Zimmerman (Dylan) with his simple message: "You gotta serve somebody." Think about that. Happy holidays. ■

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZNY

ARIES (March 21-April 19): I'm not a big fan of fear. It gets far more attention than it deserves. The media and entertainment industries practically worship it, and many of us allow ourselves to be riddled with toxic amounts of the stuff. Having said that, though, I do want to put in a good word for fear. Now and then, it keeps us from doing stupid things. It prods us to be wiser and act with more integrity. It forces us to see the truth when we might prefer to wallow in delusion. Now is one of those times for you, Aries. Thank your fear for helping to wake you up.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): "Poetry might be defined as the clear expression of mixed feelings," wrote W.H. Auden. If that's true, then your job is to be a poet right now. You seem to be awash in a hubbub of paradoxical inclinations, complete with conflicting desires and mismatched truths. There's no shame or blame in that. But you do have a responsibility to communicate your complexity with honesty and precision. If you can manage that, people will treat you with affection and give you extra slack. They might even thank you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What can you do to improve your flow? Are there obstructions in your environment that keep you from having a more fluidic rhythm? Do you harbor negative beliefs that make it harder for life to bestow its natural blessings on you? Now is the time to take care of glitches like these, Gemini. You have more power than usual to eliminate constrictions and dissolve fixations. Your intuition will be strong when you use it to drum up graceful luck for your personal use. Be aggressive. Be bold. Be lyrical. It's high time for you to slip into a smooth groove.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): In the beginning of his novel The White Castle, Orhan Pamuk offers this meditation: "To imagine that a person who intrigues us has access to a way of life unknown and all the more attractive for its mystery, to believe that we will begin to live only through the love of that person — what else is this but the birth of great passion?" How do you respond to this provocative statement, Cancerian? Here are my thoughts: On the one hand, maybe it's not healthy for you to fantasize that a special someone can give you what you can't give yourself. On the other hand, believing this is true may inspire you to take an intriguing risk that would catalyze invigorating transformations. Which is it? Now is a good time to ruminate on these matters.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Canadians Tommy Larkin and Stephen Goosney are biological brothers, but they were adopted by different families when they were young. They lost touch for almost 30 years. Once they began looking for each other, it didn't take long to be reunited. Nor did they have to travel far to celebrate. It turns out that they were living across the street from each other in the same small town in Newfoundland. I foresee a metaphorically similar experience in your future, Leo. When you get reconnected to your past, you will find that it has been closer than you realized.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): This will be an excellent week for you to talk with yourself -- or rather, with yourselves. I'm envisioning in-depth conversations between your inner saint and your inner evil twin & between the hard worker and the lover of creature comforts & between the eager-to-please servant of the greater good and the self-sufficient smartie who's dedicated to personal success. I think that in at least some of these confabs, you should speak every word out loud. You should gesture with your hands and express colorful body language. It's prime time for your different sub-personalities to get to know each other better.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In the coming week you will probably have more luck than usual if you play keno, craps, blackjack, bingo, or roulette. People who owe you money will be inclined to pay you back, so you might want to give them a nudge. I won't be surprised if you find a $20 bill lying on the sidewalk or if a store cashier accidentally gives you way too much change. In the wake of these tendencies, your main assignment is to be alert for opportunities to increase your cash flow. For example, if you wake up in the middle of the night with an idea for boosting your financial fortunes, I hope you will have a pen and notebook by the bed to write it down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "Not for all the whiskey in heaven," begins a poem by Charles Bernstein. "Not for all the flies in Vermont. Not for all the tears in the basement. Not for a million trips to Mars. Not for all the fire in hell. Not for all the blue in the sky." Can you guess what he's driving at? Those are the things he will gladly do without in order to serve his passion. "No, never, I'll never stop loving you," he concludes. According to my understanding of your astrological cycle, Scorpio, now is a good time for you to make a comparable pledge. What is the one passion you promise to devote yourself to above all others? And what are you willing to live without in order to focus on that passion? Be extravagant, pure, wild, and explicit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Dmitri Razumikhin is a character in Fyodor Dostoyevsky's novel Crime and Punishment. His surname is derived from the Russian word for "reason." At one point he makes a drunken speech that includes these observations: "It's by talking nonsense that one gets to the truth! Not one single truth has ever been arrived at without people first having talked a dozen reams of nonsense, even ten dozen reams of it." Let's make this a centerpiece of your current strategy, Sagittarius. Just assume that in order to ferret out the core insights that will fuel your next transformations, you may need to speak and hear a lot of babble.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): At the 2013 Grammy Awards, actor Neil Patrick Harris introduced the band Fun this way: "As legendary gangster rap icon Katharine Hepburn once said, if you follow all the rules, you miss all the fun." Everything about that vignette is a template for the approach you can use now with great success. You should gravitate toward festive events and convivial gatherings. Whenever possible, you should sponsor, activate, and pave the way for fun. Toward that end, it's totally permissible for you to tell amusing stories that aren't exactly factual and that bend the rules not quite to the breaking point.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some spiritual traditions regard the ego as a bad thing. They imply it's the source of suffering — a chronically infected pustule that must be regularly lanced and drained. I understand this argument. The ego has probably been the single most destructive force in the history of civilization. But I also think it's our sacred duty to redeem and rehabilitate it. After all, we often need our egos in order to get important things done. Our egos give us the confidence to push through difficulties. They motivate us to work hard to achieve our dreams. Your assignment, Aquarius, is to beautify your ego as you strengthen it. Build your self-esteem without stirring up arrogance. Love yourself brilliantly, not neurotically. Express your talents in ways that stimulate others to express their talents.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Dr. Seuss wrote his children's books in English, but he liked to stretch the limits of his native tongue. "You'll be surprised what there is to be found once you go beyond 'Z' and start poking around," he said. One of the extra letters he found out there was "yuzz," which he used to spell the made-up word "yuzz-a-ma-tuzz." I recommend that you take after Seuss — not only in the way you speak, but also in the ways you work, play, love, dream, and seek adventure. It's time to explore the territory beyond your comfort zone.

HOMEWORK: Make two fresh promises to yourself: one that's easy to keep and one that's at the edge of your capacity to live up to.

SAVAGE LOVE

WORDS OF WISDOM BY DAN SAVAGE

I am a kinky, youthful 72-year-old guy. I grew up in the Pleistocene era, when there was virtually no way to meet a kinky woman. I've had two vanilla marriages, and three months ago I ended a four-year vanilla relationship with the best woman I've ever met. I just couldn't take not being a BDSM person anymore, and I broke up with this wonderful woman so I could do BDSM. I've had some fun, but no candidate for a possible LTR has come along. In the meantime, my most recent ex (I'll call her "Mel") and I have both been bereft over our split. It is like a death, and we grieve it every day. But I need the BDSM lifestyle, and I figured that sooner or later I would meet someone else and get over Mel.

Two days ago, Mel called me and said she wants me back. She says she's willing to do what I need if it will make it possible for us to be together. Since I am a switch, it would be perfectly acceptable to me to have her abuse and torture me. I am functioning as a Dom in the BDSM world at the moment, since there are so few female switches around and virtually all female subs turn green at the idea of being with a switch. Also, the competition for female dominants is fierce, and it's too much for me — especially at age 72. However, if I had to choose to be one or the other, I would choose to be a sub to a dominant woman. Can Mel be that woman? Is it possible for a vanilla person to adapt to BDSM? Also, she does have a few weirdo fantasies of her own, such as making it with a chimp. But she stresses these are not very intensely compelling, as mine are. If it is possible for her to make this change, are there any good books on this?

Wants Helpful Insight, Please!

P.S. My son turned me on to your column recently!

"Good for you for being honest about the importance of kink in your life," says Joan Price, author of Naked at Our Age: Talking Out Loud About Senior Sex. "At our age, we often realize that life is too short for bad sex. Sometimes it takes a series of unfulfilling relationships to make sexy, silver-haired folks like us say, 'If not now, when?'"

And if not Mel, who?

You're a new reader, WHIP, so you missed this insight the first ten thousand times it appeared in my column: You'll meet two kinds of people at leather/fetish/BDSM contests, play parties, and street festivals: people who were always kinky — men and women who've been jacking/jilling off about their kinks since they hit puberty — and formerly vanilla people who fell in love with someone who was kinky, gave their partners' kinks a try (sometimes to save the relationship), and grew to love their partners' kinks.

So Mel may be able to "adapt" to BDSM. Price agrees: "Yes, it's absolutely possible for your vanilla lady to shift into kinky sex, especially since she's in love with you. Whether she's doing it just to please you or she's open to kinks herself, give her a chance."

But you're going to need to take it slow, WHIP, and you'll need to use your words.

"Tell her what turns you on," says Price. "Whisper your fantasies into her ear, share erotica or porn featuring your favorite activities. Solicit her fantasies about dominating you, if she has them, or suggest some scenes to her and see what she responds to. Once she's ready and willing, start with small steps rather than full-blown scenes, so she can ease into this new world."

And if all goes well — if Mel isn't traumatized or disgusted by BDSM sex, if she enjoys dominating you or is GGG enough to go there for you on a regular basis — don't be a stupid, selfish kinkster, WHIP. By which I mean to say: Don't neglect Mel's desire for vanilla sex. If it helps to think of vanilla sex as a horrible ordeal that you have to submit to — vanilla is a service you provide to Mel, your Dom, because you're a good slave — then ask Mel to order you to have vanilla sex.

As for books, WHIP, both Price and I recommend The Ultimate Guide to Kink: BDSM, Role Play and the Erotic Edge (Cleis Press, 2012), an informative collection of essays by a diverse group of writers that was edited by the indispensable Tristan Taormino. And if you're hoping Mel will join you at public fetish events — parties and contests and street festivals — get her a copy of Mollena Williams and Lee Harrington's Playing Well with Others: Your Field Guide to Discovering, Exploring and Navigating the Kink, Leather and BDSM Communities.

Joan Price blogs about sex and aging at NakedAtOurAge.com. Follow her on Twitter @JoanPrice.

I'm a bisexual or pansexual or omnisexual — or whatever the kids are calling us these days — woman in a monogamous marriage to a great, GGG straight man. Both of us are in our early 30s. Since getting married, we've traveled around the world and done whatever the hell we wanted. It was a crazy exciting life, but we decided it was time to stop living paycheck to paycheck, so we came back to the States.

We recently bought a house, and we were planning to have a kid next year. But now my husband says that he's not ready. He says there are things he wants to do that he will never ever get to do if we have kids now. I asked him for a time frame, and he said that he couldn't answer that. What he has said to me is: "We've always said we'd never be one of those couples that stop adventuring because we have a nest and kids and stuff." This might be a deal breaker for me. I want to be a mom. I'm ready. I don't want my husband to feel resentment that he never got to live the life he wanted — more travel? More crazy sexual adventures? — because I stuck him with a kid, but at the same time, he can't even give me a time frame. I love him dearly. He's my best friend, he's hot, he's a wonderful person and funny as hell. They don't make many men like him. What should I do?

Childless H

First, get to a couples counselor.

Second, relay this message to your husband from me: Travel and adventure — sexual and otherwise — don't have to stop after you become parents. They do become more difficult, logically speaking, and you won't be able to go adventuring on impulse anymore. But you can have adventures, dude, as a couple and as individuals. (It's good for married people, including parents, to spend time apart.) It's true, however, that most parents do stop adventuring — but that's usually because they were ready to stop adventuring or they weren't that adventurous in the first place. You can do it differently. Pro tip: It's easier to make time for adventuring if you have one kid. And traveling with a small child — even taking off to live in a foreign country for a year or two — is a lot easier than Parentlandia propaganda would have you believe. You're an adventurous person — you and your wife are adventurous people — and adventurous people can choose to be adventurous parents.

DEAR READERS: You were probably expecting me to comment on that "making it with a chimp" detail in WHIP's letter. But I had nothing to say except "Really? Holy crap. Chimp fantasies? Damn."

Sweaters & Tights.

Meet Beatrice.

Born in New York and raised in California, Beatrice's childhood dream was to be a ventriloquist. As a kid, she would make her mom take her to the library so she could borrow ventriloquism videos to study. "They're the weirdest people," she says, "and I felt that that was my kind of community." She went on to study Sociology and Drama at a university in Colorado, and then completed her Master's Degree in Performance Studies at NYU. At 24, her ideal job now is to be an audio archivist, although she plans on returning to ventriloquism if all else fails. Her outlook on life has in part been influenced by her Buddhist upbringing. Her dad, a lifelong winemaker, met her mom at work in Maui in the '70s. At the time, Beatrice's mom was a rodeo queen, but she is now teaching at a Tibetan Meditation center in California. In her free time, Beatrice likes watching Scottish films, playing pool, painting, playing the violin, and coming up with ideas for graphic novels. She is always happy when she gets the chance to eat her grandmother's homemade Italian gnocchi.
